

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

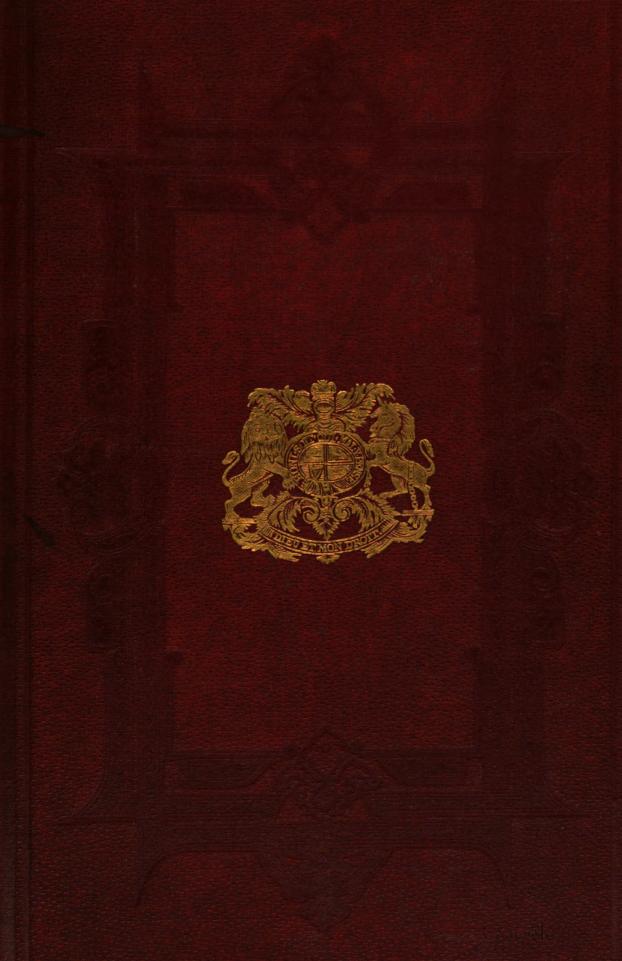

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

PREFACE.

MESSRS. KELLY, in submitting to their Subscribers and the Public the Sixth Edition of the DIRECTORY OF HAMPSHIRE, WILTSHIRE AND DORSETSHIRE, trust that it may be found equal in accuracy to the previous Edition.

Every effort has been made to render it as perfect as possible; lists of Hundreds and Poor Law Unions, and also the Polling places appointed pursuant to the Ballot Act, 1872, have been included in the Topography of each County; it is stated under each Parish in what Hundred, Union and County Court District it is situated, as well as the Diocese, Archdeaconry and Rural Deanery; and the College and University of every beneficed Clergyman have been given as far as they can be ascertained. The names of the Parish Clerks are given under each Parish; lists of Farm Bailiffs of Gentlemen farming their own land have been added; the Money Order and Telegraph Offices and Post Office Savings Banks and Government Annuity and Insurance Offices are noticed; a larger Map, corrected to the present date, is prefixed to each County, with the new lines of Railways laid down.

A sketch of the Geological features of the district, by Mr. W. J. Harrison, of the Museum, Leicester, is added for the first time.

The Proprietors have to thank those Clergymen and other Gentlemen who have given the work the benefit of their local knowledge, by correcting the proofs submitted to them, and also the Clerks of the Peace who have supplied the lists of Magistrates and other information.

HAMPSHIRE.

HAMPSHIRE, or the County of Southampton, is on the south shore of England, forming an irregular square, and lying about midway between the two southern ends of the island. A broad channel lies between the mainland and the Isle of Wight, which is reckoned as a part of the shire. The town of Southampton, with its neighbourhood, forms a shire. Hampshire is bounded on the north by Berks, on the east by Surrey and Sussex, on the south by the English Channel, the Solent and the channels of the Isle of Wight, and on the west by Dorsetshire and Wiltshire. Its length from north to south is about 55 miles, its breadth 40 miles; its area, including the Isle of Wight, is 1,032,105 acres; being the eighth English shire, and ranking among the largest.

The Isle of Wight is 22½ miles from east to west, 14 from north to south, 60 in circumference and contains about 100.000 acres.

The population of the shire was, in 1801, 210,290; 1811, 246,514; 1821, 282,897; 1831, 313,976; 1841, 354,682; 1851, 245,370; 1861, 481,815; 1871, 544,684. At the latter census there were 275,393 males and 269,291 females.

Although much of the soil is poor, the tillage of Hampshire is, on the whole, good, and the produce is large; it yields much grain, and on the chalk downs sheep are fed and race horses trained. The meadows are small. The chalk lands are adapted for pasture. Many hogs are fed in the forests, and Hampshire bacon is well known. Hampshire yields wheat, barley, oats, rye, peas, trefoil, grass, wool, bacon, honey, chalk, lime, whiting and clay. In the Wealden district hops are grown: orchards are extensive, and yield much of their produce for making cider, except on the north side of the South Downs. Much waste land has been taken in, but there are still 100,000 acres of waste and forest on the west border. The New Forest, on the west, is about 92,365 acres, of which, under the Act 40 & 41 Vict. cap. 121, the Crown has a right to plant 1,600 acres, and the plantations are under the superintendence of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests; Woolmer forest, in the north-east, 5,949; Alice Holt, in the east, 2,744. Large portions of Woolmer and the neighbouring parishes were enclosed in 1858. There is likewise the Forest of Bere, in the south-east, with 11,000 acres; Waltham Chase, near Bere, has been enclosed; and Parkhurst Forest, in the Isle of Wight, about 3,000 acres. Harewood Forest is about 2,000 acres, near Andover.

In the southern half of Hampshire the average rainfall is 30 inches per annum; but the northern half of the county is rather drier, and there about 28 inches fall yearly. There are 30 places where gauges are placed to measure the quantity of rain that falls daily: in 1878 most rain (35½ inches) fell at Southampton, and least (23 inches) at Hartley Grange, Stratfield Turgis and Bournemouth.

The northern part of the shire is mostly watered by the Wey, Enborn and Loddon, small feeders of the Thames. The Rother, a feeder of the Arun, flows in the east. The rivers falling into the English Channel are the Titchfield, Hamble, Itchen, Test or Anton, Exeor, Beaulieu, Boldre, Avon and Stour; the two latter flow along the western border from Wiltshire. The Southampton Water runs for 10 miles up the middle of the shire, and into it many of the rivers fall. On the south-west shore is a wide inlet, in which are Hayling Island and Portsea Island, each about four miles long, which divide it into three parts, Chichester Haven on the east, Langston Haven in the middle, and Portsmouth Haven on the west. The Itchen is made navigable for 13 miles, from Southampton to Winchester. The Basingstoke canal runs from Basingstoke to the Loddon and the Wey, and so to the Thames. The Arundel, Chichester and Portsmouth canal is in the east; it likewise joins the Wey. There are many ports on the coast; they are Emsworth, Havant, Portsmouth, Fareham, Gosport, Southampton, Redbridge, Lymington, Christchurch and Warsash: besides Cowes, Newport, Ryde and Yarmouth in the Isle of Wight.

The railways chiefly belong to the South Western system. The main line from London is by Woking, Basingstoke, Winchester and Bittern Road to Southampton, continued thence by Brockenhurst (with a branch to Lymington), and Ringwood (branch to Christchurch and Bournemouth), and thence by Poole Junction to Dorchester and Weymouth. From Bishopstoke, on the above line, a branch by Farcham Junction formed the original line to Gosport and Stokes Bay by one branch, and by Cosham to Portsmouth and Southsea by another.

The present communication with Portsmouth is, however, principally by the Direct Portsmouth, now also a portion of the South Western system; this line, leaving the main line at Woking, passes by Guildford, Haslemere, Rogate, Petersfield, Rowland's Castle and Havant to Portsmouth. There is a branch from Guildford by Alton and Alresford to Winchester, also a short branch from Rogate to Midhurst, in Sussex, whence there is railway communication to Petworth and Horsham by the Mid-Sussex line.

Portsmouth has also a third communication with London by the London, Brighton and South Coast railway, by Havant, with a branch to Hayling.

There is a line from Salisbury to Bishopstoke Junction and another to Ringwood, and a short line from Andover to Mottisfont, joining the Salisbury and Bishopstoke, which afford accommodation for the centre of the county. The trunk line from Basingstoke passes by Andover to Salisbury, and thence to the West of England. In the north the county is connected by a line from Basingstoke to Reading with the Great Western system, and also with the narrow gauge lines to the north.

The railways in the Isle of Wight are four; one from West Cowes to Newport, another from Ryde through Brading, Sandown and Shanklin, to Ventnor; a third from Newport to Sandown; and the line from Newport to Ryde direct.

The manufactures are of some importance, but not great, pottery were being made at Fareham and neighbourhood, and exported to the Continent and Channel Islands. At Ringwood linen collars are made by females, and also knitted woollen gloves: paper is made in the county, mostly that peculiarly for bank notes: also parchment, sail cloth and sacking: watch fusee chains are produced at Christchurch. Some sait is made; fishing is carried on in the sea coast towns; there are oyster beds at Emsworth and Hayling Island. Portsmouth is a great dockyard, naval and military station. Southampton has large steam docks and a growing trade; it is likewise the great station for the steamships to Bremen, Havre, St. Malo, Jersey, Guernsey, Spain, Portugal, the Mediterranean, East Indies, China, Australia, New York, West Indies, California, the Pacific, Madeira, Cape de Verde, Brazils and River Plate; it is the head quarters of the Ordnance Survey in the United Kingdom; and it is an emigration station. Cowes is a place for building yachts and shipa, and for repairing ships, and is the station of the Royal Victoria Yacht club. At Southampton are several carriage works. There are many visitors to the Isle of Wight, to Southampton, and the other bathing-places on the coast—Southsea, Hayling, Fareham, Bournemouth, Anglesey and Lymington. Winchester is the seat of a cathedral and college. At Portsmouth is a convict prison, and at Parkhurst, Isle of Wight a prison for convict boys; at Gosport are Haslar hospital and the Royal Clarence victualling yard. At Aldershot is the great military camp.

Hampshire is in the western circuit, the diocese of Winchester and province of Canterbury, and forms, excluding the Isle of Wight, the archdeaconry of Winchester, with the rural deaneries of Alresford, Alton western division; Alverstoke, Portsen island; Andover, north, south and west divisions; Basingstoke, north-east and south-west divisions; Bishop's Waltham; Havant; Fawley; Fording-bridge, east and west divisions; Odiham, Peterafield, Romsey, Southampton and Winchester. For parliamentary representation the county is divided into North and South Hampshire, each returning two members; and the Isle of Wight, with one member. Winchester is the place of election for the north, Southampton for the south, and Newport for the Isle of Wight. Winchester is the assist town; Southampton has assises for its own shire. The city of Winchester and the boroughs of Southampton, Portsmouth, Lymington, Andover, Newport, Christchurch and Petersfield, return members. There are nine municipal boroughs, viz.:—Andover, Basingstoke, Lymington, Newport and Ryde in the Isle of Wight, Romsey, Portsmouth, Southampton and the city of Winchester. There are also five ancient boroughs not included in the Municipal Reform Act, viz.:—Christchurch, and Petersfield, and Brading, Newtown and Yarmouth, in the Isle of Wight. There are 14 petty sessional divisions: namely, Alton in the east; Andover in the west; Basingstoke in the north-east; Droxford, Fareham, in the south-east; Kingsclere in the north; Lymington in the south-west; Odiham in the north-east; Petersfield, Ringwood in the south; Winchester fin the midland; and the Isle of Wight in the south. Winchester, Portsmouth and Southampton have separate jurisdictions.

The county contains 351 civil parishes, townships and places. There are 22 market towns, besides other towns. Winchester is called a city.

The sheriff's and the insolvent courts are held at Winchester; but district county courts are now held at Andover, Alton, Besingstoke, Bishop's Waltham, Christchurch, Fordingbridge, Lymington, Petersfield, Portsmouth, Romsey, Southampton and Winchester; and Newport and Ryde (Isle of Wight).

The chief towns are Portsmouth, Portsea, Southsea and Landport, with, in 1871, 113,569 inhabitants; Gosport, with 7,336; Southampton, with 53,741; Winehester, with 16,366; other towns are Alton, Andover, Basingstoke, Bournemouth, Christchurch, Fareham, Lymington and Petersfield; and the following in the Isle of Wight:—Cowes, Newport, Ryde and Ventner.

The following is a list of the hundreds and liberties with the places contained in them:—

Alton Hundred: — Binstead, Chawton, Coldrey, East Worldham, Froyle, Hartley Mauditt, Headley, Holybourne, Kingaley, Neatham, Shalden, West Worldham.

Alverstoke and Gosport Liberties: -Alverstoke, Gosport.

Andover Hundred: — Amport, Appleshaw, Foxcott, Fyfield, Grately, Kimpton, Knights Enham, Mouxton, Park House, Penton Grafton or Weyhill, Penton Mewsey, Quarley, Shipton Bellinger, South Tidworth, Tangley.

Barton Stacey Hundred: -Barton Stacey.

Basingstoke Hundred:—Andwell, Basing, Basingstoke, Bramley, Cliddesden, Eastrop, Mapledurwell, Nately Scares, Newnham, Pamber, Sherborne St. John, Sherfield—upon-Loddon, Tunworth, Up-Nately, West Sherborne or Monk Sherborne, Winslade with Kampshott, Wootton St. Lawrence, Worting.

Beaulieu Hundred :- Beaulieu, Exbury.

Bentley Liberty :- Bentley.

Bermondspit Hundred:—Bentworth, Bradley, Dummer, Ellisfield or Illsfield, Farleigh Wallop, Herriard, Lasham, Nutley, Popham, Preston Candover, Upton Gray, Weston Corbett, Weston Patrick.

Bishop's Sutton Hundred: —Brighton, Bishop's Sutton, Bishop's Waltham, Droxford, Durley, Godsfield, Medstead, Ropley, West Tisted, Wield.

Bosmere Hundred: -North and South Hayling, Warblington.

Bontisborough Hundred:—Itchen Abbas, Itchen Stoke. Breamore Liberty:—Breamore.

Buddlesgate Hundred:—Ashley, Compton, Crawley, Hunton, Hursley, Littleton, Little Somborne, Otterbourne, Sparsholt, Stoke Charity, Weeke, Wonston.

Christchurch Hundred:—Christchurch, Hordle, Milford, Milton, and Sopely.

Chuteley Hundred:-Church Oakley and Hannington.

Crondall Hundred (Lower Hali):—Cove, Crondall, Farnborough, Hawley and Minley, and Yateley.

Dibden Liberty: -Calshot, Dibden and Fawley.

Bast Medina Liberty:—Arreton, Binstead, Bonchurch, Brading, Calbourne, Godshill, Newchurch, Niton, St. Helene, St. Lawrence, Shanklin, Whippingham, Whitwell, Wootton and Yaverland.

East Meon Hundred:—Colemore, East Meon, Froxfield, Prior's Dean, Privett and Steep (part of).

Rvingar Hundred:—Ashmansworth, Baughurst, Burghclere, East Woodhay, Freefolk Manor, Highelere, Hurstbourne, Itchingswell or Ecchinswell, Newtown, Tufton and Whitchurch.

Fareham Hundred: - Fareham.

Fawley Hundred:—Avington, Beauworth, Bishop Stoke, Cheriton, Chilcombe, Easton Headbourn, Worthy, Hinton Ampner, Kilmiston, Martyr Worthy, Morestead, Old Alresford, Ovington, Owslebury, Titchborne, Twyford and Wennall.

Finch Dean Hundred:—Blendworth, Bramshott, Buriton, Catherington, Chalton, Clanfield, Greatham, Idsworth, Liss, Petersfield, Sheet and Waterloo.

Fordingbridge Hundred: --Fordingbridge, Godshill, Hale, Ibsley, North Charford, Rockbourn, South Charford and Woodgreen.

Hambledon Hundred:-Hambledon.

Havant Liberty :- Havant.

Holdshott Hundred:—Everaley, Hartley Westpall, Heckfield, Mattingley and Hazeley Heath, North Waltham, Silchester, Stratfieldsaye and Woodmancott.

King's Somborne Hundred:—Houghton, King's Somborne, North Baddesley, Romsey Extra and Timebury.

Kingsclere Hundred: -- Ewhurst, Kingsclere, Litchfield, Sydmonton and Wolverton.

Mainsborough Hundred:—Brown Candover, Chilton and Candover.

Mainsbridge Hundred:—Botley, Bursledon, Chilworth, Hamble-le-Rice, Hound, Millbrook, North Stoneham, St. Mary Extra and South Stoneham.

Meon Stoke Hundred:—Bramdean, Corhampton, Exton, Meon Stoke, Soberton, Upham, Warnford and West Meon.

Micheldever Hundred:—East Stratton, Farley, Chamberlayne, Iwarraton, King's Worthy, Micheldever and Northington.

New Forest Hundred: - Boldre and Brockenhurst.

Odiham Hundred:—Bramshill, Dogmersfield, Elvetham, Greywell, Hartley Wintney, Odiham, Rotherwick, South Warnborough and Winchfield.

Overton Hundred:—Ashe, Deane, Laverstoke, Overton, Steventon and Tadley.

Pastrow Hundred:—Crux Easten, Faccombe, Hurstbourne Tarrant, Linkenholt, Thruxton, Upper Clatford, Vernhams Dean and Woodcott.

Portsdown Hundred:—Bedhampton, Boarhunt, Farlington, Porchester, Southwick, Widley and Wymering.

Redbridge Hundred: - Bramshaw (part of) and Nursling, or Nutshalling.

Ringwood Hundred: -Burley-with-Bistern Closes, Rllingham, Harbridge and Ringwood.

Selborne Hundred: -- East Tisted, Empshott, Farringdon, Hawkley, Newton Vallence and Selborne.

Titchfield Hundred: - Rowner, Titchfield, Wickham and Wickham Forest.

West Medina Hundred:—Brixton, Brook, Carisbrooke, Chale, Freshwater, Gatcombe, Kingston, Mottistone, New post, Northwood, St. Nicholas-in-the-Castle, Shaifleet Shorwell, Thorley, West Cowes and Yarmouth.

Westover Liberty: - Christchurch and Holdenhurst.

Wherwell Hundred: —Abbots Ann, Bullington, Chilbolton, Goodworth Clatford, Longparish and Wherwell.

Andover Borough :-- Andover.

Lymington Borough: - Lymington.

Portsmouth Borough:-Portsea, Portsmouth and Great Salterns.

Alton Town :-Alton.

Alresford Town: - New Alresford.

Romsey Town :- Romsey Infra.

Southampton Town:—All Saints, Holyrood, St. John, St. Lawrence, St. Mary and St. Michael.

Stoke Liberty:—Bishop Morley's College, Close of Winchester, College Mill, College Wharf, Milland, St. Bartholomew Hyde, St. Cross Hospital Precinct, St. Cross Mill, St. Faith, St. John, St. Lawrence, St. Mary Kalender, St. Michael, St. Maurice, St. Peter Cheesehill, St. Peter Cole-brook, St. Swithin, St. Thomas, The Weirs, Winchester College and St. Mary College and Wolvesley.

Thorngate Hundred: —Bossington, Broughton, Dunwood, Rast Dean, East Tytherley, Bast Wellow, Eling, Frenchmoor, Leckford, Lockerley, Longstock, Lyndhurst, Michelmerst, Minstead, Mottisfont, Nether Wallop, Over Wallop, Sherfield English, Stockbridge and West Tytherley.

Hampshire was first peopled by the Ibernians or Euskardians; afterwards by the Celtic Welsh, called Segontlags, who were driven out by the Belgians, of whom three tribes seem to have held Hampshire in the time of the Cas-are, namely—the Regni on the coast, the Belgians in the middle, and the Attrebates on the north. In the year 43 of the common era, and in the reign of the Emperor Claudius, the Beigians were overcome, and the Romans became masters. These made towns and roads. Venta Beigarum, now Winchester, was a chief place, with many roads leading from it, Clausentum was near Southampton. Silchester was a great station, and is supposed to have been Calleva of the Romans, and to have been called by the Welsh Caer Segont. There were other Roman towns and camps not so well marked. Andareon seems to have been at Andover. There are camps at Tuksbury Hill, Egbury, Ladle Hill, Beacon Hill, Woolbury, Bury Hill, Somborn, Quarley Mount, Haydon Hill, Godshill and Castlefield. Some of these were, perhaps, Welsh, Danish, or English.

In the 6th century, the Romans having left, and the Welsh being in power, some of the English chiefs landed. Porta founded Portsmouth. In 519, Cerdic, of the blood of Woden, began the kingdom of the West Saxons, the kings of which were very powerful, and many of them Bretwalds, and afterwards became kings of England. The Isle of Wight formed a small kingdom under Wessex and Sussex. The Meanwara, a small kingdom under weseex and susses. The continuous too, had a commonwealth by themselves in Meon, Mainsbridge and Mainborough. Winchester was the capital of Wessex and for a long time the capital of England. In the 9th and 10th centuries the Danes wasted Hampshire. Winchester, in civil wars, was frequently attacked. In the Parliamentary war, several battles and sieges took place in Hampshire. There are many Roman, monastic and castel-lated antiquities, some of which are in good preservation. Hampshire is the birth place of the poets Young, Warton, Dibdin and Watts; of Bishop Wickham, Sir William Petty, Jonas Hanway, Brunel, Charles Dickens, Sir James Lancaster and Pococae.

The Royal Hants County Hospital, Winchester, founded 1736, was the earliest provincial one in the kingdom; the annual income from endowments is about £800, and from subscriptions &c. about £2,000. The new building, from plans by Mr. Butterfield, at a cost of £30,000, is situate in the Romsey road. Consulting physician, Thomas Hitchcock M.R.C.P.; physician, William England M.D.; surgeons, F. J. Butler, M.D., T. C. Langdon P.R.C.S., and William A. Richarda M.D.; chaplain, Rev. E. Pirmstone M.A.; house surgeon & secretary, A. R. W. Sedgefield M.B.; matron & lady superintendent of nurses, Miss Sarah Ann Freeman; dispenser, J. Joyce. Freeman; dispenser, J. Joyce.

The Royal South Hants Infirmary, at Southampton, is a large, handsome building, in the Italiau style, erected in 1838; its beautiful chapel, in the Perpendicular style, was built in 1838 by Dr. Oke, with a portion of the money entrusted to him by the late Miss Dowling; George A. K. Lake M.D. hon. sec.; William Robt. White esq. house surgeon; Rev. Thomas Garrett, chaplain; Miss Fanny Lay, Haslar Hospital, near Gosport, for sick and wounded seamen and marines, was established by the instrumentality of the Barl of Sandwich, minister of George II.; it is on a scale commensurate with its object, and arranged for admitting 2,000 patients at once; it is a quadrangular building, 1,600 feet long, with fine piazzas, having a small chapel and every requisite office attached: John W. Reid M.D. deputy inspector general in charge.

Royal Victoria Hospital, at Netley, is a noble and most extensive building, for the reception of invalided soldiers: it is capable of accommodating 1,900 patients, and was erected in 1863 at a cost of above £400,000; principal medical officer, Surgeon-general H. H. Massy M.D., C.B.

The Hants County Lunatic Asylum at Knowle is 3 miles north-west of Fareham; it is an extensive establishment, ambased as the mean officer, and also a farm: John Manley embracing the usual offices, and also a farm: John Manley embracing the usual offices, and also a farm: John Manley M.D. medical superintendent; Walter Herbert Barker B.A. assistant medical officer; Rev. George H. Masou B.A. chaplain; F. M. Aylen, clerk.

Her Majesty's prison, Winchester, Capt. Chas. W. Hill, governor; Rev. J. A. Ladbrooke, chaplain; F. J. Butler M.D. surgeon; W. A. Richards, deputy surgeon; James Greig, chief warder.

Coroners for the County.—C. W. Waters, Winchester; S. Clarke, Whitchurch; B. Goble, Fareham, & R. Harfield, Southampton

THE GEOLOGY OF HAMPSHIRE.

In the "Proceedings" of the Winchester and Hampshire Scientific and Literary Society for 1873 we have a list (compiled by Mr. W. Whitaker F.G.S.) of 315 papers, books &c. which relate to the geology of this county and its immediate neighbourhood. Foremost among these are the excellent coloured maps of the Government Geological Survey, showing the exact position of the various strata, on the scale of one inch to a mile. Mr. Whitaker's own "Memoir on the Geology of the London Basin" describes minutely the north and north-east of Hants, and the eastern district round Petersfield is described in the "Memoir on the Wealden District" by Mr. W. Topley.

In the "Journal of the Geological Society" there are valuable papers by Sir Charles Lyell, Professors Owen and Prestwich, Messrs. Clarke, Codrington, Meyer, Woodward and others; Mr. Caleb Evans has well described the neighbourhood of Portsmouth in the "Proceedings" of the Geologists' Association, vol. ii.

The general arrangement of the beds of rock which form Hants is not difficult to understand. The chalk forms a great fold or curve, or roll, occupying a great tract in the centre of the county and dipping or inclining both to the north and to the south. In both these directions it is overlaid by much newer strata—sands and clays of tertiary age -those on the north forming part of what is called the London Basin, and those on the south the Hampshire Basin. In the east of the county, however, the chalk has been so worn away by the various agents of denudationrain and rivers, frost, ice and snow, the sea &c. as to expose certain rocks which lie beneath it, and which are therefore the oldest that occur in the county. These old rocks form the termination of a considerable tract called the Wealden, which stretches through Kent and Sussex to the sea.

We shall now describe the strata in succession, commencing with the lowest or first-formed.

NECCOMIAN OR LOWER CRETACEOUS FORMATION. -Four sub-divisions have been traced in the beds of this age by the officers of the Geological Survey: the lowest of these, called Atherfield Clay, just touches the county boundary along the railway east of Bramshot and south of Hind Head. Next are the Hythe Beds, composed of sandstones and limestones about 300 feet thick; these form the high ridge extending by Hind Head, Greyshot Down, Bramshot and Rake Common: they dip to the west and are overlaid by the Sandgate Beds, composed of sands and clays about 60 feet in thickness; these occupy low ground about half-amile in width, and extending from Petersfield to two miles north of Headley, beyond which point they cannot be traced; they are exposed in the railway cutting north of Rake. In the cutting at Petersfield we see the Folkestone Beds overlying the last-named strata; they are sandy, with a bed of coarse grit, coloured red by iron and known as carstone: the thickness of this last division is about 100 feet; it can be traced from Frensham Common through Woolmer Forest and Greatham to the west of Petersfield, whence It curves eastwards.

The above strata are collectively known as the Lower 400 or 500 feet thick, and lastly the chalk with flints, shout Greensand; their fossils, such as ammonites, nautili &c. 200 feet thick. All these chalky strata lie in the form of a indicate their deposition in a sea of moderate depth. Economically they are not of much importance; the carstone is used for pavements and building walls; in his "History" wards we soon find them inclining in that direction, and of Selborne," Gilbert White writes:—" From a notion of rendering their work the more elegant and giving it a finish, masons chip this (Woolmer Forest) carstone into small fragments about the size of the head of a large nail; and then stick the pieces into the wet mortar along the joints of their freestone walls; this embellishment carries an odd appearance, and has occasioned strangers sometimes to ask us pleasantly 'whether we fastened our walls together with tenpenny nails?'"

THE UPPER CRETACEOUS FORMATION.—The first stratum of this division is called the Gault; this is a stiff blue clay about 100 feet thick, which is worked for brick-making in some pits half-a-mile south of Petersfield, and extends thence by Stroud Common, Greatham Mill and Worldham, through Alder Holt Wood towards Farnham. At the junction of the Gault with the Lower Greensand a bed of phosphatic nodules occurs.

The Upper Greensand.—This rock is not true to its name in this neighbourhood; it is here calcareous and of a whitish hue, resembling indeed the lower beds of the Chalk: it extends from Binstead, through Selborne, to Buriton and East Meon. The beds are well exposed in quarries and deep road cuttings, and the Malm rock (a hard sandstone) forms a well-marked cliff 30 or 40 feet in height. Of fossils, Pectens and Nautili are most common; there is a good collection (made by Mr. W. Curtis) in the museum at Alton.

In the north of Hants there is an exposure of the Upper Greensand at Kingsclere and Burghelere, running east and west for about 5 miles; this outcrop is geologically termed an inlier, as it is surrounded by higher strats (chalk), by whose denudation it has been exposed to view. A similar inlier occurs further west at Shalbourne, which, however, barely enters Hampshire. These two inliers owe their exposure to a line of elevation running east and west; the beds curve over, dipping on one side to the north and on the other to the south; they consist here of greenish sands and irregular beds of gritty sandstone overlaid by yellowish-white malm rock.

The Chalk.—This is a soft, white, earthy limestone, perhaps the most widely known of all the British rocks. It forms the centre of Hants, stretching from Inkpen Beacon, Kingsclere and Odiham on the north to Landford, Hursley and Hambledon on the south, a distance of about 22 miles. The mass of chalk here exposed and extending westwards into Wilts, is the largest expanse of this rock in the British Islands; from it the North and South Downs run eastwards, and the Berkshire Downs and Chiltern Hills north-east.

Forming the base of the chalk we find a stratum two or three feet thick, called the Chloritic Marl, because it is speckled with green grains: it contains a band of (so-called) coprolites, which when ground up and chemically prepared, form a valuable manure. This bed extends from Alton to Selborne, and thence to East Froyle, where it has been largely worked. Above this comes the Chalk Marl, 40 or 50 feet thick, which is simply chalk with a slight admixture of clay; next we get the chalk without flints 400 or 500 feet thick, and lastly the chalk with flints, shout 200 feet thick. All these chalky strata lie in the form of a great arch; on the north they dip sharply to the north, then about Andover they lie horizontally, but following them southwards we soon find them inclining in that direction, and they pass down underneath newer rocks, beneath the Solent, rising up again in the Isle of Wight. In the isolated chalk ridge called Portedown, we have a repetition of this arch on a smaller scale.

Chalk is so homogeneous a rock that it would not be easy to discover its dip, were it not for the nodules of flint in the upper beds, which usually occur in lines along the planes of bedding. Flint is nearly pure silica: it existed discolved in the water of the sea in which the chalk was formed, and in the water which has since percolated through it; it was deposited on and around the various sponges, echinoderms &c. which lived in such numbers on the floor of the chalk occan, and has also filled up fissures, and replaced chalk and organic matter at intervals since that period. The Lower Chalk is harder than the Upper, since the silicious matter, which in the latter is aggregated into nodules, is in the former equally dispersed throughout the rock, forming about 4 per cent. of its mass.

Chalk contains many fossils, visible enough to the naked eye; large Ammonites are common near Selborne, Belemnites looking like pointed penells abound, globular sea-urchins of the genera Ananchytes, Micraster and Galerites are common, with bivalve shells like Pecten nitidus, Inoceramus Cuvieri &c., but these are not all; when we disintegrate the rock and examine it microscopically we find it largely formed of the tiny shells of creatures called Foraminifera, whose descendants now inhabit the North Atlantic, their débris forming the soft greyish-white ooze on which the Anglo-American telegraph cable lies, Chalk is quarried at many points in Hants to burn into lime; the rock in Harewood Forest near Andover, which is very soft and white, is especially suited for this purpose. It absorbs water rapidly, so that the hills, or downs as they are called, are always dry and even the valleys between are usually without the running streams which are found on other formations. By the carbonic acid gas contained in the rain-water the chalk is dissolved and carried away in solution, so that no thickness of soil is formed, and the beautiful curves which characterize the scenery are formed of the solid rock covered only with a short, sweet herbage, which forms admirable pasturage for sheep. Swallow-holes are hollows connected with fissures in the chalk; in the pond at Alresford, said to have been formed by Bishop Lucy in King John's time, the water sometimes disappears, being carried off by such an opening; the pot-holes, filled up with gravel, which are so noticeable in the sides of railway-cuttings through the chalk, have also been formed by the dissolving of the rock by the percolation of carbonated water.

THE TERTIARY EPOCH.—EOCENE FORMATION.—The strata which rest upon the chalk are of very much newer age than it. The chalk, as we have indicated, accumulated on the bottom of a deep sea; it must have been consolidated and elevated so as to become land, and then again depressed before the beds of clay and sand of Tertiary age, which we are now about to describe, were laid down on it. These beds once covered it over everywhere, but after the great, though slow, earth-movements took place, which resulted in throwing the rocks of the south of England into long folds or undulations, running east and west, the newer beds were worn off the anticlinal curves, or tops of the Hampshire folds, and so the beds which occupy the northern hollow or synclinal fold, were separated from the similar strata which lie in a similar hollow on the south, between Portsmouth, Romsey, &c. The occurrence of patches of Tertiary strataoutliers as they are termed-which are found at various points between the London Basin on the north, and the Hampshire Basin on the south, confirm the fact of their former connection. We shall describe these two areas separately.

LONDON BASIN.—In the absence of the Thanet sand, we find the Woolwich and Reading Beds resting directly upon the chalk; they have a high northerly dip, and so cover a narrow tract of country from Inkpen, by East Woodhay, Old Basing, and near Odiham. These beds are mottled sands and plastic clays about twenty feet thick; they are sometimes worked for brickmaking. Except a few oyster shells (Ostrea bellovacina), fossils are scarce or absent.

The London Clay is bluish-grey or brown in colour, and about 50 feet thick; it has a rather broad outcrop between the Woolwich and Reading Beds on the south, to the Thames on the north. Mr. Bristow records numerous fossils from the steep sides of a brook on the southern corner of Kingsclere Common, including such shells as Pectunculus brevirostris, Turritella imbricataria &c.

The Bagshot Beds are of a sandy nature, but with some thin bands of clay. They form much heath and waste land at Silchester Common and West Heath, and again on the east side of the river Loddon, to the north of Aldershot and Winchfield, extending as far as the Blackwater on the north and east, and forming a region of sandy flats and ridges, on which the troops frequently exercise. Fossils are all but unknown in these beds.

THE HAMPSHIRE BASIN.—Here again the Tertiary strats occur in the same order, but with a southerly dip, and covering more ground; moreover, beds are found at the top of the series which are newer—later formed—than any which occur in the north or London Basin.

The Woolwick and Reading Beds extend from near West Bourn by Bishop's Waltham, Michelmarsh and Tytherley, then curving round to the south-west, past Sherfield English; these strata are commonly termed the "Red," or "Plastic" clay; they are worked at many points for brick and tile-making, and preserve their character-unchanged over great distances.

The London Clay or Bognor Beds occur between West Bourn and Havant, and extend thence to Timsbury. On the south side of the Portsdown ridge we find a repetition of these two series of Tertiary strata, forming North Portsea, Farsham and South Hayling: the beds were once continuous over the top of Portsdown, but all the elevated portion has been swept away. In the Dockyard Extension Works at Portsmouth, in 1870, the London clay was finely exposed in sections 500 feet long and 60 feet or more in depth, and the "Plastic Clay" lying beneath it was also reached. Large collections of fossils were made by Mesars. C. J. A. Meyer and C. Evans, some of which were new to science, and have been since described by Dr. H. Woodward (see Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc. vol. xxvii. p. 74 and p. 90).

The Bagshot Beds.—These are sands and elays extending over a considerable area, forming, indeed, all the southwest of Hants between Southampton and Romsey and the sea, including the New Forest. Several sub-divisions can be traced in them: (1). The Lower Bagshot Beds. From clays of this age, at Bournemouth, Messrs. J. S. Gardner and W. S. Mitchell have obtained large numbers of well-preserved plant-remains, chiefly leaves of the cinnamon, fig, the fan palm, beech, maple, elm, acacia, ferns, &c.; on the whole these indicate a warmer climate than now prevails in this latitude. These beds are of fresh-water origin, and were deposited by a large river running from the westward.

Next come sands and clays called the Bracklesham Beds, and above them the Barton Beds; the latter form the north part of the New Forest and extend to the sea, forming the cliffs at Barton, so noted for the feesils they have yielded. Remains of a few fishes, of a crocodile, and of about 200 species of marine shells have been found, with large Nummulites, foraminifera which are named from their resemblance to pieces of money (nummus, a coin).

The Headon Beds form the south part of the New Forest, reaching from Beaulieu Heath to Hordwell Cliff; at the latter place they include beds of clay which are highly fossiliferous; bones of reptiles and mammals (the Palæotherium, &c.) occur with both brackish-water and marine shells. The Headon strata are sometimes called the Fluviomarine Series, to indicate their formation in and near the estuary of a great river.

OUTLIERS OF ECCENE AGE.—At Horsdon Common, Conholt, Windmill Hill, East Stratton and two or three other places, detached patches of the Woolwich and Reading Beds occur, resting on the exposed tract of chalk which now separates the Tertiary rocks of the London and Hampshire Basins. These outliers are but the remnants of beds, certainly some hundreds of feet in thickness, which have been denuded by the combined agencies of the weather and the sea.

PLEISTOCENE OR POST-TERTIARY DEPOSITS.—Hampshire has none of the Boulder clay, or erratic blocks, which in counties north of the Thames tell of the passage of glaciers or icebergs over the surface. But the thick gravel beds with which the hills are often capped and the plateaux covered, are perhaps of quite as early a date. These occur ou ground east of Southampton, 420 feet high, and also cover the New Forest at a considerable altitude; on Portsdown Hill, at a height of S00 feet, we get an old seabeach. These facts indicate a considerable elevation of the south of the county since the time of formation of these gravel beds at or a little below the sea level. The chalk of the western part of Hants, bordering Wiltshire, is thickly strewn with blocks of a coarse sandstone, the well-known "grey-wethers," or sarsen-stones: these are probably the remains of a bed of sandstone forming part of the Bagshot Series, which formerly extended far in this direction. In the "Geological Magazine" for 1866 (vol. iii. p. 296), there is an account, by Col. Nicolls, of some large sarsen-stones found in the neighbourhood of Southampton, and preserved in the court-yard of the Hartley Institute. At some points, as at Upton Grey, there is much "clay, with flints," lying on the chalk, representing indeed its insoluble residue, and formed from it: where this occurs the oak grows well, while on a chalky subsoil we seldom see this tree. Lastly, we get deposits of gravel on the sides and at the bottom of the existing valleys, formed and still forming by the rivers which have scooped out these PRE-HISTORIC MAN .- In gravel beds on Southampton Common and near Bournemouth, occurring at heights of 120 to 160 feet above the sea, and far above the level of the neighbouring streams, flint implements have been discovered by Messrs. Read, Jas. Brown, Stevens, Dr. Blackmore and others, most of which are now in the Blackmore Museum, at Salisbury: they are roughly-chipped oval or pointed lumps of flint, and belong to the Palæolithic or Older Stone Period: the men who used them were quite ignorant of the use of metals. Other flint tools of lighter and more elegant form, such as arrow heads, celts or axeheads, and flakes or knives, have been found at Horndean, St. Mary Bourne, Portsmouth, Andover, Bishopstow &c.: these mostly occur on or near the surface, and are usually rubbed or polished; they are assigned to the Neolithic or Newer Stone Period.

Omnibuses leave the Royal hotel, High street, to meet the trains, for the conveyance of passengers by the South Eastern railway at North Camp CARRIERS.—Pickford & Co. to all parts; Sutton & Co. to all parts

Aldershot Camp.—In 1854 a very extensive camp was established, the Government having for that object purchased a large tract of heath and common lands, which extends into the neighbouring parishes of Farnborough, Ysteley and Crondall: the Camp, North and South, consists of ranges of wooden huts in parallel lines, on the south of which permanent barracks have been erected for all branches of the service, with quarters for officers, riding schools, stabling, hospital and other buildings suitable for the troops. The Queen's Pavilion, for the reception of Her Majesty, is a building of wood and corrugated iron. The officers' clubbouse is also of corrugated iron. There are two stations at the North Camp, one on the South Eastern railway and the other on the South Western railway. The Camp is the head quarters of a military district, the remainder of Hampshire being in the Southern military district, the head quarters of which are at Portsmouth. All Saints' church was erected which are at Portsmouth. All Saints' church was erected in 1863 for the use of the troops: it is a Gothic building of red brick with Bath stone dressings, consisting of chancel, nave and sisles and has several stained windows and will hold 3,000 persons. There is an iron church in the South Camp, which is used also by the Presbyterians, and the Catholics have also an iron church. There are various institutions for the benefit of the soldiers, including an amateur theatre in the South Camp. A hospital for the military has been erected on an eminence called Gun Hill, near the South Camp and overlooking the town: it is a handsome building, of brick with Bath stone dressings, and has a clock tower and clock with four dials, 8 feet in diameter, illuminated; it will hold upwards of 250 patients. The cost of the building was upwards of £45,000: Messrs. Martin, Wells & Co. were the builders. Wells & Co. were the builders.

NEW and OLD ALRESFORD.

NEW ALRESPORD is a well-built union and market town, and station on the Mid Hants railway leased to the South Western railway, and polling place for the Northern division of the county, winchester petty sessional division and county court district, rural deanery of Alresford, archdeaconry and diocese of Winchester, 57½ miles from London by road, 19 north-east from Southampton, 10 south-west from Alton, and 6½ north-east-by-east from Winchester, on the old road to the latter city. Alresford was incorporated at an early period, and sent a member to Parliament in the reign of Edward I. which privilege has long since been lost. An interesting feature here are the streams of pure water, which abound with trout; they take their rise principally from a abound with trout; they take their rise principally from a sheet of water, which is the source of the river Itchen, called Alresford Pond, covering an area of 32 acres. The Bishop of Winchester holds a court-leet at Michaelmas, and the magistrates for the division sit in petty session once a fort-night, at the Town hall. The market is held on Thursday for the sale of corn and seed. The fairs are the last Thursday in July, the first Thursday in September, the first Thursday after October the 16th, and the last Thursday in November for sheep and cattle. There are two branch banks, a savings bank and two brewerles. The church of St. John the Baptist is a plain building, and has chancel with chancel aisles, nave, aisles, north porch, and square embattled tower, with clock and peal of 8 bells. The register dates from 1724 for baptisms, 1740 for marriages, and 1698 for burials. The living is a rectory, yearly value £340, and about 14 acres of glebe, and an annual rent charge on the Mid Hants railway of £41, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. William Sealy M.A. of St. John's College, Oxford. There is a Free Grammar School at New Alresford, founded by Henry Perin eag. of Old Alresford, in the year 1698; the endowment consists of a house for the master and 52 acres of land: there are also National and British schools, and an Orphan in July, the first Thursday in September, the first Thursday there are also National and British schools, and an Orphan home for the children of soldiers and sailors, supported from the Patriotic Fund. The charitable bequests amount to over £40 a year. Here is a Congregational chapel. The town has some land and the fair tells given by a former Bishop of Winchester; the trustees are the bailiff and bur-Bishop of Winchester; the trustees are the bailiff and burgesses, who expend the money in supporting the charities, and for the general welfare of the town. In the parish are Langtons, the seat of William Benson J.P. and Arle Bury, of Capt. G. F. Marx J.P. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Lord Asbbarton, Capt. G. F. Marx and W. Benson esqrs. The soil is chalky loam; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, cats, and turnips. The area is 692 acres; rateable value, £5,006, and the population in 1871 was 1,623.

Parish Clerk, James Sait.

Old Alreaford is a parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Fawley, Winchester petty sessional division and county court district, Alreaford union, rural deanery of Alreaford and archdeaconry and diocese of Winchester, separated from New Alresford by one of the streams which subsequently form the Itchen. The church of St. Mary which subsequently form the itenen. The church of St. Mary is a well-built structure, with a tall massive tower, and a fine peal of 6 bells: it has been greatly improved by the substitution of atone mullions for the old wooden ones, and by the addition of a transept in the Early English style: a by the addition of a transept in the Early Rnglish style: a chancel arch has been inserted, and the whole interior rendered of an ecclesiastical character: Admiral Lord Rodney, who died in 1792, lies buried here. The register dates from the year 1556. The living is a rectory, yearly net value £556, with residence and about 26 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. George Henry Sumner M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford, rural dean and hon. canon of Winchester. The charities are £3 10s. yearly. In the parish are Old Alresford House, the seat of the yearly. In the parish are Old Alreaford House, the seat of W. W. Bulpett esq. J.P. and Upton House, the seat of the Misses Onslow. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are T. A. Houghton J.P. and W. W. Bulpett J.P. esqrs. The soil is chalk; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, oats and turnips. ALTON, in the Northern division of the county, is a market, union and county court town, parish and railway station on a branch of the South Western railway, in the petty sessional division and hundred of the same name, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Alton western division, 49 miles from London, 17 northeast from Winchester, 11 south-by-east from Basingstoke and 83 south-west from Farnham. The river Wey rises close to the town. The only historical event connected with Alton is the defeat of the Royal forecast mutar Colonel Boles. Alton is the defeat of the Royal forces, under Colonel Boles, by the Parliamentarians, commanded by Sir William Waller, in 1643. This place returned a representative to Parliament in the reign of Edward I. and it is now one of the polling places for North Hants. The town is lighted with gas and is under a Local Board of Health of Il members. The church of St. Lawrence is an ancient and spacious edifice, supported by long columns of the Perpendicular style: from the centre of the church on the south side rises a Norman tower (with clock and 8 fine toned bells), which is surmounted by a spire: it has a south porch: the church was restored in 1867 at a cost of about £3,600; a new organ chamber was added, also a fine-toned organ; there are two handsome stained windows, the one at the east end being very large. The register dates from the year 1615. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £500 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester and held by the Rev. William Durst M.A. of Binmanuel College, Cambridge. The vicarial rent-charges are commuted at £280 bridge. The vicarial rent-charges are commuted at £280 yearly, with an additional £1 per acre on hop land. The church of All Saints, attested on the Winchester road, is a stome building in the Barly English style: it was erected in 1874, from designs by Mr. F. C. Dyer, architect, London, at a cost of about £3,500, raised by subscription: it consists of chancel, nave, transpot and organ chamber, and has sittings for 400 persons, all of which are free. The register dates from the year []. The living is a vicerage, yearly dates from the year []. The living is a vicarnge, yearly value £300, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. Francis Jervoise Causton M.A. University College, Oxford. Here are Congregational and Wesleyan chapels and a meeting-house for the Society of Friends. Eggar's Grammar School was founded in 1642 by Mr. John Eggar, for the instruction of 24 boys in Greek and Latin; the iscome, about £250, is derived from money invested with the Charity Commissioners, and other corrects. Petty sessions are held every alternate Tuesday. at the Town Hall. A market for corn is held every Tuesday, and one for cattle and sheep every alternate Tuesday, the market-house has been enlarged. A conluesday, and one for cattle and sneep every atternate luesday; the market-bouse has been enlarged. A considerable lamb market is held on the Butts, near the town, the day after Stockbridge fair, in July. The annual fairs are on the last Saturday in April (for sheep and cattle), and the 29th of September (for horses, sheep and occasionally hope). Here are two breweries and a paper manufactory. In the neighbourhood are extensive hop plantations. A plot of ground has been given by Henry Hall esq. in a commanding and advantageous position in the centre of the

from designs by Charles E. Barry esq. architect. A Mechanics' Institution was established in 1837; it has a reading room well supplied with daily and other newspaper and monthly magazines, and a library containing 1,709 volumes: there are also many volumes of abridgments of specifications, lent by the Commissioners of Patents for inventions, and a natural history museum, scientifically arranged: the museum is worthy of attention chiefly from its containing a good local collection of geological specimens and birds : lectures are delivered in the course of the winter ; it is also used for concerts: Mr. W. H. Darley is the secre-tary. The Cottage Hospital, established here in 1869, has been found insufficient for the demand made on it, and the new one will provide 12 additional beds. The Hospital is supported by veluntary contributions: the secretary is the Rev. William Durst M.A. vicar of Alton. The New Assembly Rooms form a fine building; the large hall will hold 600 persons, in addition to which there are committee rooms and other conveniences for the use of the public: secretary is Mr. Radnor Lucas. Works for obtaining a supply of water for the town were commenced in May, 1876, supply of water for the town were commenced in May, 1800, and have been completed at a cost of £0,000, under the direction of Messrs. Gotto & Beesley, of George street, Westminster: the water is obtained from a well sunk 140 feet into the lower chalk: the supply is constant, and hydrants are fixed at short distances in case of fire. A fire brigade was established in 1863, consisting of the leading the town—numbering at present beading tradesmen of the town-numbering at present about twenty-four members—who muster the first Wednesday of every month for drill, and have three fire engines, one o which has steam power: a sum of £800 was subscribed on the formation of the brigade, but the members bear all current expenses. Thomas Geale bequeathed, in 1653, four tenemenis, in Church street, to be converted into almshouses, and which are now inhabited by eight poor persons appointed by the vicar and churchwardens for the time being; the endowment of the above has been lost; a rent of 6d. per week is paid by the inmates, from which fund the fabric i-rualntained. Normandy Cottage, Normandy street, is supported by Miss M. Crowley, for the residence and maintenance of six aged women. Charities amounting to £36 venriy are distributed. Thedden Grange, the seat of John Gathorne Wood eq. 1. P. is situated 2 miles west from Altor. the grounds are extensive and beautifully wooded; near it a chapel of ease was erected in 1854; the whole expense was borne by the late John Wood esq. Montagu George is a compet of ease was erected in 1934; the whole expense was borne by the late John Wood esq. Montagu George Knight esq. ALVERSTOKE is an incorporation, parish and village and urban savitary district, 2 miles south from Gosport and 15 miles by road and 21 by steam launch west from Portsmouth. The parish includes the town and port of Gosport, the chepelries of ANGLESEA and the districts and hamlets of ELBON, with HARDWAY, FORTON, BROCKHURST and BRIDGEMARY: it is in the Southern division of the county, county court district of Portsmouth, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Alverstoke, Stokes Bay pier and station are in this parish. The Act The Act of Parliament for this undertaking was obtained on the plans of Mr. Hamilton H. Fulton M.INST.C.E. and the works were designed and carried out by him. The Gosport Road station of the South Western Company's Stokes Bay branch is contiguous to the Stoke and Bury roads, and about half a mile from Alverstoke village. The church of St. Mary was an ancient Norman edifice, consisting of nave and aisles, with long narrow chancel, enlarged in 1865 by half a new church, one bay of nave and aisles, and a beau tiful chancel with sisles and vostry; it is built of stone and has square tower, partly of brick, with clock and 2 bells. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, with the chapelry of Anglesey annexed, gross yearly value £1,250 and glehe, net £750, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. gross Thomas Walpole M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford, rural dean, and hon. cauon of Winchester. Christ Church has been erected in the Stoke road as a chapel of ease to St. Mary's; ft is a handsome stone structure in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave and south sisle. The Alver-stoke cemetery is situated in Ann's Hill road, near Bury cross: the grounds are between 8 and 9 acres in extent, and have two mortuary chapels. Haslar Hospital, Forts Monckton and Gilkicker, and the Blockhouse Fort, Brown Down battery and Fort Gomer are in this parish, Fort Rowner is partly so. Alverstoke incorporation comprises Alverstoke and Gosport, and Burrow Island or Rat Island. The gross estimated rental is £62,302; rateable value, £46,341: for estimated rental is £62,302; rateable value, £46,341; for officers, see Gosport. A chapel for Dissenters of all denominations, called the Union chapel, is in Stoke road. An establishment for religious and literary instruction of soldiers and sailors is placed in Stoke road, and called the Industrial Home; at this establishment also about 20 destitute children are educated, clothed and fed; this charity depends on public support. The charities amount to £18 yearly. Bricks are made to some extent in this parish. Henry Bruce Arnaud seq. is lord of the manor. The principal of the property of the sail of

ANDOVER.

ANDOVER is an ancient municipal and parliamentary borough, market and union town, and station on the South 18 north-east from Salisbury and 19 west from Basing-Western railway, giving name to the hundred, and petty sessional division, and is a polling place for North Hants: it is in the rural deanery of Andover western division, archives a extensive tract of woodland bordering on Salisbury plain; it is principally disposed in three broad streets; since the opening or the S.W. railway many new buildings and a district called Newtown have sprung up in the vicinity of the station; it is well supplied with water and lighted with Several packs of hounds are kept in the neighbour-

The borough dates its incorporation from the time of King John, and was represented in Parliament in the reign of the first Edward, but afterwards suffered its privileges to sleep till the 27th of Elizabeth, from which period it returned two members until 1867, when the "Representation of the People Act" reduced the number to one. By the Reform Act, 1832, Foxcotte and Knight's Enham were Melorm Act, 1852, rozcotte and Knight's Emunic were added to the parliamentary horough. Andover gives the title of Viscount to the Earl of Suffolk.

The corporation consists of a mayor, 4 aldermen and 12 councillors: it has a separate court of quarter sessions and commission of the peace. A burial board consisting of 7 members was formed in 1869. The cemetery is at the north end of the town, adjoining the church; it is about 4 acres in extent and has a chapel for the use of Nonconformists, and an excellent mortuary.

The church of St. Mary is a handsome and spacious edifice, erected at a cost of nearly £30,000, and at the expense of the late Rev. William Stanley Goddard D.D. formerly head master of Winchester College: it is in the formerly head master of windnesser conege: it is in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, with a lofty tower (with crocketed pinnacles), which contains a peal of 8 bells and a clock, and is a conspicuous object from all parts of the neighbourhood: the church will bold about 830; the seats are all free: in the galleries are the remains of two curious tombs, taken from the old church, which have been restored, one representing a male and female kneeling, with a tomb between them; the other has on the left the figure of a man seated; on the right are seven figures kneeling; an inscription underneath bears date 1611: there are several very handsome stained windows, two being in memory of the Goddard and Gales families: the organ is a fine one, and stands in a chapel erected from designs by W. White esq. P.S.A. under whose direction the whole church has been thoroughly refitted. The register dates from the year 1580. The living is a vicarage, with Foxcotte chapelry annexed, tithes commuted at £570, in the gift of Winchester College and held by the Rev. Charles Collier M.A. Trinity College, Dublin and ad eundem of Oxford. F.S.A. surrogate.

Oxfort, F.S.A. surrogate.

The Free Grammar School, founded in 1569, has an endowment of £20 yearly and a house, where ten boys of the town are educated free of cost: there is also a school for twenty poor children, founded by John Pollen esq. endowed with a house and £10 a year.

Administrative the abusels a school-house has been exceed by Miss M. Gale and £50 a year.

Adjoining the church, a school-house has been erected by Miss M. Gale and endowed with £10,000 £3 per cent.

Consols; part is used as an Infant school and the other part as a School of Industry, in which a limited number of girls are maintained, clothed and educated. Here are likewise

National and Missish ask and further and likewise National and British schools for boys and girls, and four Dissenting places of worship.

The Baptist chapel is a handsome building of stone and white brick, with two stone porticoes and a circular stained window, built in 1866 by public subscription, at a cost of about £1,100.

The Cottage Hospital in the Junction road is a handsome red brick building; it was erected in 1876, at a cost of over £2,000, chiefly through the liberality of Sir Charles Pressly x.c.s. Henry Thompson esq. and the late Mr. William Gue, and is supported by voluntary contributions.

There are almshouses for six poor men, originally founded in 1686 by John Pollen eq. formerly one of the representa-tives of this borough; also almahouses for four aged women and another for four women, called Spital Almshouses. Charities producing £200 are distributed yearly, and another for four women, endowed with 3s. 6d. a week, situate in the Common Acre.

The spacious Town hall, erected in 1825, at a cost of £7,000, stands on arches and is a stone building in the Classical style; the large room is capable of seating 300 persons and is used for concerts, lectures and meetings; it contains also a council chamber, a beuch room for criminal business, and other rooms: the borough sessions are held in street every Monday. The pig market, on Friday, is held at the Masons' Arms, Winchester street. There is a sheep fair on the 17th November and a wool fair on the last Friday The proximity of Weyhill fair, about 31 miles west, contributes materially to the commercial prosperity of Andover: this fair, one of the largest in the county, is visited by farmers from almost every part of England. There are also two very considerable sheep fairs held at Appleshaw, 51 miles north-west from Andover.

At the foot of Bury Hill, on the Pillhill Brook, are the Waterloo foundry and ironworks, conducted by Mesers. Tasker and Sons, general engineers, ironfounders and agricultural implement manufacturers. There are breweries and two banks.

Catherine Hanson, in 1570, appropriated an acre of ground as a walk, planted with trees, for the recreation of the townspeople.

The Roman road from Winehester to Cirencester passed near Andover, and is still visible in Harewood, near Wher-well; and the Portway crosses this road to the north. A Roman station is supposed to have existed here, a supposi-tion which acquires a probability from the remains of several Roman encampments in the immediate neighbourhood, and of a large one on the summit of Bury Hill, about 2 miles south-west. Folksbury, or Balksbury, is a large camp, 1 mile south-west. The Devil's Ditch is 3 miles north-west. On Danebury Hill, a long elevated ridge which terminates in a lofty headland overlooking Salisbury, is a complicated distribution of the summer of the su circular entrenchment, with very high ramparts; and near it are several barrows, one of them called Canute's Barrow. Another camp occupies the summit of Quarley Hill, also on the borders of the plain and 8 miles west from Andover, and various tumuli are scattered over its neighbouring downs.

The Mayor and Corporation are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the Barl of Portsmouth, Colonel William Henry Earle, Albemarle Dewar, Frederick Ellen, R. D. Walbey, Alfred Butterworth, William Fowle and J.

P. Good esqrs.

The area is 8,390 acres; rateable value, £23,439; the population in 1871 was—of the parish and municipal borough, 5,501, and of the parliamentary borough, 5,744, which includes 67 in Poxcotte parish and 176 in Knight's Enham parish; and of the Local Board district, 4,195.

Parish Clerk & Organist, John William Chnter.

HATHERDEN is a hamlet, 3 miles north. By an order in Council, dated May 7, 1858, all parts of the parish of Andover north of the South Western railway were formed into an independent district, named the district chapelry of Christ Church Smannell with Hatherden: Smannell was separated from Hatherden in 1875. Christ Church is a modern flint and brick building, and consists of chancel and nave, with beli turret and 2 bells. The register dates from the year 1858. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £148 net, in the gift of the Hishop of Winchester and held £145 net, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. George Allen Procter M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. Here is a Free school for 24 poor children of Hatherden and Wildhern, endowed by James Lambourne in 1725 with £30 a year. The principal landowners are Alfred Butterworth, Colonel Earle & Thomas Child. The area is 2,954 acres; the population in 1871 was 321. WILDHERN, 3 miles north from Andover, is in this parish; here is a Wesleyan Methodist chapel.

SMANNELL is a hamlet, 21 miles north-east, formed into a separate ecclesiastical parish in 1875. Christ Church, a modern building of flint and brick, consists of nave and north undern building of flint and brick, consists of nave and north aisle, with bell turret. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £110, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. John Samuel Jones. Here is a National school supported by the Dewar endowment of £36 per annum. LITTLE LONDON, SI miles north; and WOODHOUSE (or Woodhams), S miles north, are hamlets in the parish of Smannell. The principal landowners are Mrs. Longman, Colonel Earle & Ms. George Thomas Tabor; the area is 2,854 acres; the population in 1871 was 409.

ANGLESEY (or ANGLESEXVILLE), a chapelry, in the parish and incorporation of Alverstoke, Southern division of the county, county court district of Portsmouth, Alversioke rural deanery and Winchester archdeaconry and diocese, is a beautiful village of modern date, commanding extensive views of the Isle of Wight, Spithead and the Motherbank, 2 miles south from Gosport and 15 west from Motherbank, 2 miles south from Gosport and 15 west from Portsmouth by road and 2½ by steam launch. The earliest building, Uxbridge House, was erected in 1826, the first stone having been laid by the then Marquis of Anglesey. St. Mark's chapel is in the Elizabethan style, and was opened in the year 1844; it is a red brick building, with stone dressings. The register dates from the year 1845. The living is a chapelry annexed to Alverstoke and held by the Rev. Thomas Walpole M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford, rural dean, and honorary canon of Winchester. Here is a large hotel with assembly room; also another building, containing reading room and baths, with pleasure gardens attached. The situation is elevated, and the surrounding scenery commands situation is elevated, and the surrounding scenery commands universal admiration for its beauty and great variety. The Gosport terminus of the South Western railway is about 2 miles north. The Gosport Road station of the South Western railway is about 1 mile north, and Stokes Bay station and free pier on the same railway are contiguous to the village, and form the abortest route for the Isle of Wight. Forts Gilkicker and Monckton are also contiguous.

BASING or (OLD BASING), is a parish and considerable village, in the Northern division of the county, Basingstoke whilage, in the Northern division of the county, Basingstoke hundred, petty sessional division, union and county court district, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Basingstoke north-eastern division, 2 miles north-east from Basingstoke, on the river Loddon. The South Western and the Basingstoke branch of the Great Western railways, and Basingstoke canal pass through the parish; a high embankment of the South Western is near the church. The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure of large dimensions (capable of seating 600), consisting of chancel, nave, aisles extending to ends of chancel, with tower and clock: there are but 2 bells, the others having been taken away and deposited in neighbouring churches in the days of the destruction of Basing House: there is a handsome marble font of the 15th century, also a vault of the Paulet family in which the Dukes of also a valit of the Paulet mainly in which the Dukes of Bolton have been interred: there are several monuments, one to Henry, sixth |Duke of Bolton, by Flaxman. The church was restored in 1874, under the direction of T. H. Wyatt esq. architect; the general features of this church are unaltered by the restoration, which was much needed; the sum expended was £2,800; there were some few tiles of the 13th or 14th centuries found in the flooring of the church, was also some carved stones, above in that the church was as also some carved stones, shewing that the church was originally a Norman building of some grandeur: a handsome organ was added in 1878, at a cost of £400. The carliest entry on the register is a burial in 1655. The living is organ was added in 1878, at a cost of £400. The earliest entry on the register is a burial in 1655. The living is a vicarage, with Up-Nately annexed with a handsome vicarage house, erected in 1866, by the College and the Vicar at a cost of between £2,000 and £3,000, in the patronage of the President and the Fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, and held by the Rev. Robert Falkner Hessey M.A. formerly Fellow and tutor of that college. The tithes of Basing parish were commuted in the year 1840: the vicarial for £475, and the rectorial for £705; these belong to the President and Fellows of Magdalen College. The income of living of Basing with Up-Nately is made up of a grant from the college of a portion of theabove tithes, together with the vicarial and rectorial tithes of Up-Nately, making a total of about £640, as the value of the living. Besides the Duke of Bolton's charity of £24 yearly, there are smaller charities left by Henry Lamport, yearly, there are smaller charities left by Henry Lamport, by the Upton family, by William Barber, and recently by Charles Webb of Basingstoke. Basing has been dis-Charles Webb of Basingstoke. Basing has been distinguished as the scene of a severe battle, fought in 871, between the Danes and the English, when the latter, under the command of Alfred and his brother, King Etheldred, were defeated. There appears to have been a castle here at some remote period, for in a grant made to the priory of Monks Sherborne, in the reign of Henry II. mention is made of the Old Castle of Basing; this appears to have been rebuilt in a magnificent style by Paulet, the first Marquis Wichelman Heritage and the still of the still o rebuilt in a magnificent style by Paulet, the first Marquis of Winchester: on the breaking out of the civil war Basing House was put into a state of defence, and garrisoned and held for four years, by John, the fifth Marquis of Winchester, for King Charles I. (of whom there is a full length portrait in the house at Hackwood), but was carried by storm by Oliver Cromwell, who destroyed the place; the area of the works occupied 14½ acres; the form was irregular, ditches very deep, the ramparts high and strong, as is evinced by the remains: the north gateway and a portion of the outward wall are still standing. Some interesting excavations have lately taken place in the ruins by order of Lord Bolton. About a mile and a half south of the village, excavations have lately taken place in the ruins by order of Lord Bolton. About a mile and a half south of the village, and situated partly within the parish, is the park and stately mansion of Hackwood, the property and residence of Lord Bolton. The Union workhouse for Basingstoke district stands in this parish; it is capable of containing 426 inmates; for particulars see Basingstoke. Lord Bolton is lord of Basing manor, The Rt. Hon. BASINGSTOKE.

BASINGSTOKE is a municipal borough, market, railway and union town, and a polling place for the Northern division of the county, in the petty sessional division, union and hundred of Basingstoke, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester, and rural deanery of Basingstoke south-western division and is situated in a fertile part of the county, on the South Western main line to Southampton; the South Western line to Andover, Salisbury, and the West of England, joins here, as does also the Great Western railway from Reading to Basingstoke: it is also the terminus of the Basingstoke canal, and is situated on the river Loddon, 46 miles from London by the old road, and 47 by railway, 19 north-cast from Winchester, 15½ south from Reading, 16 south-cast from Newbury and 32 north from Southampton.

According to Domesday Book Basingstoke was a royal manor, which had never paid tax or been distributed into hides, and had, at the survey, a market worth £3 0s.

Basingstoke sent members to Parliament from the 23rd

Edward I. to 4th Edward III. when at the solicitation of the inhabitants, it is supposed, the privilege ceased.

The town possesses a charter of incorporation, granted by

James I. and confirmed by Charles I.; and under the Act

5th & 6th William IV. is governed by a mayor and four aldermen and twelve common councilmen, with the assistance of a town clerk, sergeant-at-mace, and other sub-ordinate officers. Magistrates for the town are also ap-pointed under a commission of the peace, in pursuance of the Act, and petty sessions are held every Tuesday at the Town Hall, before the mayor and magistrates. A police force, consisting of a superintendent, a sergeant, and five constables, is under the control of a watch committee of the corporation. The county magistrates hold petty sessions here on the first and third Wednesday in every month; and a court-leet is held under the lords of the manor, the jurisdiction of which extends over 19 tithings.

The town is lighted with gas, and supplied with water obtained from the chalk at South View, raised by steam pump from a well in the Reading road to the tank at South View: there is anficient presented to the tank at South View: View: there is sufficient pressure to throw a constant supply of water to a considerable height in cases of fire, through hydrants in different parts.

The church of St. Michael and All Angels is a fine Gothic structure, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and side chapel: the nave is said to have been erected in the reign of Henry VIII. under the direction of Fox. Bishop of Winchester, and is a good specimen of the architecture of that period: and is a good specimen of the architecture of that period: at the west end is a square tower, with angle turrets, having a peal of 8 bells, and chancel aisle, now used as an organ chamber: galleries have been erected on both sides of the church; it is capable of seating 1,400: there are seven stained windows, and a carved oak pulpit on stone base, placed in memory of Bishop Wilberforce: a small library, the gift of Sir George Wheler, is deposited in the parvise above the south porch. The register dates from the year 1586. The living is a discharged vicarage, yearly value £497, with residence, in the gift of the President and Fellows of Magdaien College, Oxford, and held by the Rev. James of Magdaien College, Oxford, and held by the Rev. James Elwin Millard D.D. of that college. The Congregational Church is the oldest nonconforming body in the town, dating back to 1862, when the Rev. John Hook, on his ejectment by the Act of Uniformity from the Rectory of Kingsworthy, Winchester, became its pastor:

its place of meeting until 1800 was in Cross street, when the building in London street was erected, which was en-larged in 1860 to its present dimensions: the style of architecture is Roman-Doric, having an imposing front facing the street; it is capable of seating about 600. An organ was erected by subscription in 1876. The pastor is maintained and the expenses defrayed by the voluntary system, new rents having been abolished about 1873. Comsystem, pew rents maying been accounted about 16/3. Commodious class rooms were added to the large school room at the rear of the church in 1872 at a cost of £500. There are about 500 scholars on the books; minister, Rev. H. Barron. There is also a Congregational chapel in New road, and there are other places of worship for Primitive Methodists, Countess of Huntingdon's followers, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Bible Christian denomination, the Brethren, and a and Bible Christian denomination, the meeting house for the Society of Friends.

The Cemetery, situate at the highest point of the town, with the disused burial ground—the Holy Ghost chapel Liten—covers an area of 6½ acres: it contains two mortuary chapels, and is vested in a Burial Board.

The Society of Friends have a small burial ground adjoining the Cemetery.

The Queen's Grammar school, formerly the Holy Ghost school, was founded and endowed by Lord Sandys in 1555: school, was founded and endowed by Lord Sandys in 1955: it was rebuilt on a new site in 1855, under the direction of scheme of the Court of Chancery, dated 11th June, 1852: a new school room was added in 1874, and it is now capable of holding 80; it is a handsome brick building, pleasantly situated on the Andover road, having 3 acres of recreation ground attached. The capitation fees are £3 for boys under 14 years of age, and £4 for boys above that age, and the school is open to all boys of the neighbourhood. The Crown school is open to all boys of the neighbourhood. school is open to all boys of the neighbourhood. The Crown has the patronage; the Queen is the visitor, and the governing body consists of eight trustees, of whom three are elected by the Town Council, three by the Municipal Charity Trustees, the vicar and mayor being members ex officio: the school has an endowment of £200 yearly, arising from land and houses, and the second master is entitled to £20 yearly from Sir James Lancaster's charity. There are twelve exhibitions of £15: during the past six years the buildings have been twice enlarged.

The Blue Coat School was founded in 1646 by Richard Aldworth eq. and has an endowment of about £180 yearly value for maintaining, clothing, educating and apprenticing eight boys, being sons of indigent persons of Basingstoke: the boys are boarded and educated at the National Boys' school, Cross street, which will hold 224, and is sup-ported by a small endowment, school pence, and Government grant.

The Girls' and Infants' National school, Church square, is capable of holding 100 girls and 150 infants, and is supported by subscription, Government grant and school pence.

A small Mission school was built in the Reading road in 1874, and conveyed to the vicar and churchwardens for the 1874, and conveyed to the vicar and charawardens for time being.

The British school, Sarum road, was founded in 1840, and built in 1841, at a cost of £600: it is a mixed school, and is capable of holding 206. An Infant school room has been added (1875), at a cost of £700.

Basingstoke is situated in the centre of an extensive agricultural district, and has a considerable trade in cora malt, coals, timber and other merchandise. Here are the North Hants Iron Works, a large brewery, and saw mills. A Town Hall was erected in 1898, and consists of a reading room, a justice room, retiring room, handsome stone staircase leading to a spacious hall or ball-room, councilrooms and ante-room, with other convenient offices, town clerk's and borough surveyor's effices; and behind the building is a market for the sale of meat, poultry, fish, and vegetables; the cost of erection and the site amounted to upwards of £10,000k.

A large Corn Exchange was opened by Lord Bolton in February, 1865: it is a handsome building, with 150 stands; the capital was originally raised by shares of £25 each, which have now been paid off; the Corporation has taken it under its control.

The principal market day is on Wednesday, for corn and cattle; there is also a market on Saturday for meat, poultry, fish and vegetables. An important sheep fair is held on the 19th of July.

The 25th Hants Rifle Volunteer Corps, formed in 1875, has a strength of 80 men; its armoury is in Church street.

The Mechanics' Institute and Club, New street, is affiliated to the London Working Men's Club and Union, and was established 1841: the present hall was built in 1870, at a cost of £1,200 (including £300 for site): it is a brick building, containing a club room capable of helding 200, large reading room, library with 2,000 volumes, class rooms, and librarian's residence: it is supported by subscriptions of members, of whom there are 397.

There are Alushouses in London street, founded in 1607 by Sir James Deane, for eight aged persons, two of whom are elected from the parish of Deane: there is an annual distribution of £123 6s. 8d. among the inmates. Almshouses in Hackwood road were founded by Joseph Page esq. of Emfield. Middlesex, in 1806, for three indigent persons, who receive 5s. weekly and coals; there are also three almehouses in Reading road unendowed.

The charities belonging to the town are very considerable left by the Duke of Bolton, Sir James Lancaster, Richard Aldworth esq. founder of the Blue Coat School; Richard Deane, Francis Russell and John Hall esqrs. and Messrs. Wigg Smith, Payne, Stocker and Pemerton, and in modern s by the late vicar, the Rev. Robert Cottle and Charles Webb, Dr. Sheppard and Mrs. Sheppard, his widow, who built and endowed the National schools for boys and girls. The amount for distribution in money and kind is £150 yearly.

The Cottage Hospital situated in Hackwood road, was built and furnished at a cost of nearly £2,000 raised by subscription from the inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood: its object is to supply sick and suffering poor persons with medical attendance and careful nursing in a quiet home; it will depend on voluntary contributions; president, Thomas Pain esq.; hon. sec. John Dew.

St. Thomas' Home is situated on the north side of the town on an elevated and healthy site; the complete scheme comprises seven cottages, three laundries, chapel, superior's comprises seven cottages, three isundries, chapel, superior's and warden's rooms, infirmary, general kitchen and offices, sufficient, when complete, to hold eighty-four penitents, and the working staff; at present the buildings are available only for thirty-six inmates: the home is designed for the friendless and fallen, and is worked by the sisters of St. Thomas the Martyr, Oxford. COUNTY MAGISTRATES FOR BASINGSTOKE PRITY SESSIONAL DIVISION :-

Sclater William Lutley, esq. chairman, Hoddington house, Odiham

Besch William Wither Brameton, esq. M.P. Oakley hall, Basingstoke

Belton The Right Hon. Lord, Hackwood park, Basingstoke Jervoise Fras. Jervoise Ellis, eq. Herriard ho. Basingstoke Portal Wyndham Spencer, esq. Malahangen, Basingstoke Rycroft Sir Nelson, bart. Kempahott park, Basingstoke visitor: the land has been purchased, the present buildings erected and the fustitution maintained by voluntary offerings and annual subscriptions, payable at the Capital and Counties

Bank, Basingstoke.

The Noly Ghost chapel, a once beautiful edifice, the ruins of which are on the north side of the town, on an eminence commanding an extensive prospect, was huilt by Sir William, afterwards Lord Sandys, who, with Richard Fox, Bishop of Winchester, obtained a licence to found a free chapel, and therein likewise to instruct youth in

Among the eminent natives of this place may be noticed John de Basingstoke, a distinguished scholar of the thinteenth century, and Archdescon of Leicester about the year 1230; also Siv James Lancaster, an emissent navigator in the reign of Elizabeth; Dr. Joseph Warton P.R.s. who was head master of Winchester College, and his brother, the Rev. Thomas Warton 8.D. professor of poetry at the University of Oxford and poet laureate: the father of the Wartons was vicar of Basingstoke, also professor of poetry in the above university; his remains lie in the chancel of the church.

About a mile south is Hackwood House, a large handsome mansion, the seat of Lord Bolton, which was designed by Inigo Jones; it stands in a well-wooded park of about 700 acres, stocked with deer and abounding with fine old oak, beech and other timber trees.

An Archeological and Field Club was formed here in 1879: the Rev. J. B. Millard is president and Charles F. Cooksey esq. hon. sec.

A Steam Laundry and Bath Company has been formed here

The Corporation are lords of the manor, and there are numerous landowners.

The soil is chiefly loam; the subsoil is chalk. The land is mostly arable, producing abundant crops of sainfein, turnips, wheat, barley and oats.

The area is 4,636 acres, about 107 of which are common, restricted to certain householders of the town; rateable value, £28,668; the population of the municipal borough and parish in 1871 was 5,574.

WINKLEBURY is a large circular camp, 2 miles northwest.

Verger, Edward Alfced Hopkins.

EASTROP next BASINGSTOKE (of which it may be considered a suburb) is a parish, adjoining the town on the east. The church of St. Mary is supposed to be an ancient structure, though no records have been preserved to fix its exact date: it was formerly one of the smallest in the diocese, but in the year 1865 it was enlarged by clongation, through the liberality of the late Lord Bolton and others. The register dates from the year 1750. The living is a discharged rectory four times of meantains out of the discharged rectory, four times of presentation out of five being in the gift of the trustees of the Rev. Richard John Shields M.A. of University College, Durham, the present incumbent (tithes commuted for a rent charge of £85.) Part incurabent (nines commuted for a rent charge of 250.) Fara of Hackwood House and park are in this parish. Lord Bolton, who is lord of the manor, and with Mrs. Russell Apletre, are the principal landowners. The soil is loam; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are roots, sainfain, wheet, barkey and oats: the area is 438 acres; ratoable value, £1,068; the population in 1871 was 113.

The Branch line from Ringwood, through Christchurch to bournemouth, has its terminus here, which is called Bournemouth East, while the terminus of the line from Poole is called Bournemouth West; both lines belong to the London and South Western railway.

The town has increased rapidly and contains numerous

The town has increased rapidly, and contains numerous capacious and elegant mansions and villas, and is much frequented by invalide on account of its mild and genial requenced by hvanus on account of its late and genial atmosphere, its facilities for bathing, and the beautiful scenery in its neighbourhood. Bournemouth is pre-eminently adapted for a watering place for summer and winter; in the latter season it is sheltered from cold winds.

winter; in the latter season it is sheltered from cold winds. Sir James Clark and Drs. Aithin & Graville, in their respective publications on elimates, constitutions, and watering-places, strongly recommend this favoured spot, for preserving the health that is good, and strengthening the constitution that is impaired.

The Pier, bullt in LN79, is well worthy of the place: it is of iron, from designs by C. Burch esq. c.z.: its total length is 840 feet, and cost £22,500. Mesars. Burgheim & Co. of London, were the contractors.

The harbour of Poole is entered from the Great Bay, west of the Isle of Wight, and is subdivided into the Christchurch, Hengistbury, and Poole Bays, Boarnemouth being situated at the centre of the latter Bay. The splendid scenery of hill and dale, studded with well-built residences, forms a picturesque view; the terraces, slopes, and roads are irregularly laid out. On the borders and in the vicinity of Bournemouth are many handsome residences of the nobility and gentry; the country consists partly of wood and forest lands, and partly of common and down lands, covered with heath and gorse.

The town is governed by a Board of Improvement Commissioners of 17 members.

St. Peter's ecclesiastical parish was formed in 1845 from the civil parishes of Christchurch and Holdenhurst. church of St. Peter was originally a mere sea-side village church: to this a south aisle was added, afterwards a north aisle; later a clerestory was built over the roof of the old chapel, the last remains of which were then cleared away; it has chancel, chancel aisles, north and south transepts, with eastern chapels with groined stone roofs and a tower and spire (the organ is on the north side): there are two and spire (the organ is on the north sade); there are two vestries, one over the other, for the clergy and choristers: the eastern half of the chancel has groined stone roof: there is an elaborately sculptured reredos, which was erected by Mr. Earp: on either side of the sacrarium, in the eastern bay, is an inlaying of marble and alabaster, and in the next areade sedilia: the two western bays have rich iron grilles dividing them from the transepts: the seats for the choir are of oak, and richly carved: the piers are generally clustered shafts of marble and stone, the marble used being Purbeck and Devon. The register dates from the year 1845. The living is a vicarage, having an endowment of £50 yearly and residence, in the gift of Sir G. E. M. Tapps Gervis Meyrick bart, and held by the Rev. Edward Harland M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford, prependary in Lichfield cathedral. Here are National schools, erected in 1850, and added to in 1874, with master's residence, supported by voluntary contributions.

The ecclesiastical parish of the Holy Trinity was formed in 1867 from Holdenburst civil parish. The church was erected in 1869, and is of diapered red brick: it is cruciform, with apse chancel, the organ being on the north side: the nave is lofty, with an arcade of five arches on either aide, with carved stone pillars with richly carved corbels, and has a clerestory: the east window of richly stained glass, in seven lights, was erected by public subscription to the memory of Robert Kerley esq. the donor of the site of the church: the pulpit is of alabaster and colored marble, erected by the congregation to the memory of Captain Maxwell Falcon R.N. in 1872: at the western or chief entrance, is a spacious vestibule with an apse centre, extending from south to north, lighted by 11 dwarf windows, with The living is a vicarage, endowed with £150, in the gift of trustees and held by the Rev. Philip Frank Ellot M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford.

The ecclesiastical parish of St. Michael was formed in 1874 from the parish of St. Peter. The church is of stone, with Bath stone dressings, in the Early English style, at present (1880) consists of nave and aiales to which it is intended to add chancel and tower; it will seat 600 persons. The register dates from the year 1874. The living is a vicarage endowed with £150 yearly, in the alternate gift of George Durrant esq., of Norwich, and the representatives of the late J. B. Wanklyn esq., of Cheam, Surrey, and is held by the Rev. Edward Wanklyn M.A., of Queen's College, Oxford. The first room of a set of Parochial Schools was opened in 1878, it is a nivel ashed for hors civils and infants.

it is a mixed school for boys, girls and infants.

The ecclesiastical parish of St. Clement was formed in 1872 from Holdenhurst civil parish. The church is situated at Springbourne, and is of stone, with Bath stone dressings, and was erected in 1872: it consists of chancel, nave and north aisle, separated by an arcade of six arches on pillars, with organ to south of chancel: a memorial chapel occupies the north-east end of aisle: there are no fixed seats, but chairs are used: it will seat about 350 persons: the entire cost of site, building of church, schools, and vicarage house, and of the endowment of living, was defrayed by Edmund Christy esq. of The Knole. The register dates from the year 1872. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £240 with residence, in the gift of Edmund Christy esq., and held by the Rev. William Purton M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford.

The church of All Saints, which stands in the civil parish of Parkstone, was erected in 1877, it is a plain stone building in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave with bell turret, and one hell, the entire cost of building church and vicarage and of the endowment was defrayed by the late Henry Bury esq., of Branksome Tower. The register dates from the year 1877. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 with residence, in the gift of the Bury family and held by the Rev. Edward Alexander Bury M.A. of University College, Oxford

The Catholic Church of the Sacred Heart is a handsome Gothic structure of stone; it has chancel, nave, aisle and tower: the open roof is supported on an arcade of arches, with richly carved stone columns: the nave is divided from the aisles by a double row of columns supporting transverse arches, the tower is 80 feet high and is furnished with an Angelus bell: the High altar and Lady altar, each with its reredos, are of Caen stone richly carved by Earp of London; it will seat about 500 persons.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian church was opened in 1872; it is of brick, faced with Swanage stone, in the Early English style; the roof is open, with enriched sprandrils, stained in oak: the fittings are of oak: on the south side is a stained window of elaborate design: the church will seat 350 persons: a school room and vestry are formed under the church. G. B. Bruce esq. has been a large subscriber to the building fund; total cost £3,400.

The Society of Friends erected a meeting-house in Avenue road in 1871.

The Baptist chapel erected in 1876 from designs by C. C. Creeke esq. is a substantial Gothic building, of white brick with stone facings and the front is of Bath and Swanage

The Richmond Hill Congregational chapel is a handsome cruciform Gothic stone structure, erected at a cost of nearly £4,000: it was opened in March 1859, and can seat 800 persons: it was enlarged and lengthened in 1872.

The East Cliff Congregational chapel erected in 1879 is a handsome building of white brick with Bath stone facings, having a tower 90 feet high in which a clock is to be placed as soon as sufficient funds have been raised, the fittings are of pitch pine, the cost was £4,000, and sittings are provided for 650 persons.

The Cemetery with mortuary chapel lately constructed by the Burial Board is situated on the Wimbourne road, about a mile from the centre of the town, the chapel consists of nave, chancel, transepts, tower and spire, under one roof; the transepts and chancel comprise the consecrated portion, while the nave is the Nonconformist section; the area of the grounds is twenty acres, and the total cost was £20,000.

The Gas and Water company's works are situated about a mile west of the town, the water supply is obtained from near Parkstone and is of the purest quality.

near Parkstone and is of the purest quality.

The Town Hall, situated in a central position opposite the Arcade, comprises hall, local board offices and professional chambers. The principal façade is in the Christchurch road, a portice and vestibule lead to a spacious hall capable of holding 800 persons, with dais and orchestral gallery; the buildings belong to a limited company, under whom the Bournemouth Commissioners, the Local Authority, are lessees, they were designed by and erected under the supervision of C. C. Creeke, architect of Bournemouth. Petty sessions for Ringwood division are held here on first and third thursdays in the month: and at Christchurch on third thursdays in the month; and at Christchurch on second and last mondays.

The National Sanatorium is a splendid stone building for the reception of convalescent consumptive patients of both sexes, and for those suffering from other diseases of the chest, who may benefit by a temporary residence in a dry and salubrious locality: this institution was opened in 1855, and is supported partially by voluntary contributions.

The Hahnemann Convalescent Home has also been established for the same class of cases as the Sanatorium, being treated on homoeopathic principles.

The Firs Home for incurables receives patients affected with chest diseases whose cases are too severe for the Sanatorium; it will hold 21 patients.

The Bournemouth General Dispensary was founded in 1858, and combines wards for urgent surgical and medical cases; the management of the institution is in the bands of a committee; the president is Richard Stephens esq. of Eastington House, Bournemouth, to whom, together with the late C. W. Packe esq. M.P. the first president, the institution owes its origin.

The Hip Hospital is a branch of the London Hip Hospital for children.

The Herbert Home, situated near Alum Chine to the west of the town, is also devoted to the treatment of consumptive patients.

Bournemouth is divided into two sections by the brook from which the name is derived, along the banks of which a beautifully laid out pleasure ground extends for fully a mile. From the Square, the centre of the place, diverge roads leading westward to Poole, eastward to Christchurch and north to Wimborne.

The Exeter Park hotel is pleasantly situated near the pier, The exercity are noted in passantly situated near the per, and the Bath hotel is near the beach, overlooking the bays. The commodious and spacious reading-rooms and library, which are pleasantly situated on the beach, are well supplied with the London and provincial newspapers and periodicals: the library consists of several hundreds of standard and useful works: adjoining are the baths.

The Bournemouth Aquarium and Winter Gardens are now being constructed from designs by Mesers. Fletcher, Lowndes & Co.; the internal arrangements are being carried out under the direction of Mr. C. C. Creeke, architect of Bournemouth.

The Bournemouth Club, situated close to the pier, at the foot of the West Cliff, is a well-arranged building in the classic style of architecture, from designs by Messrs. Tuck & Burton, erected at a cost of £3,000. The Meyrick Club for tradesmen is in Avenue road.

On the West Cliff is the Coast Guard Station: from this spot are the most magnificent sea views in or near Bournemouth: on the right, or south-west, are the Isle of Pur-beck, Corfe Castle, Poole Harbour and Branksome Tower: on the left, or south-east, the Isle of Wight and the Needles, and Hengistbury or Christchurch Head.

There are three Banks: the Wilts and Dorset occupies a commanding position near the Arcade: it is built entirely of Ham Hill stone, from designs by C. C. Creeke, and cost £5,000. The National Provincial Bank in Sonthbourne terrace is also of good elevation, with Bath stone front. Messrs. Eliot, Pierce, Eliot & Eliot have also a branch here.

There are two newspapers published here, "Bournemouth Visitors' Directory," is published weekly, and the "Bournemouth Observer," is published bi-weekly.

Sir G. B. M. Tapps Gervis Meyrick bart, is lord of the manor of the hundred of Westover and principal landowner.

The population in 1861 was 1,940, and in 1871 was 6,507 in St. Peter's parish, and 634 in Holy Trinity parish, and 5,906 in the Local Board district.

Boscombe is an important and rising suburb of Bournemouth, situated on the coast to the eastward : it is separated from Bournemouth by the Boscombe Chine Gardens. There are here many houses of good class occupied by resident gentry. Here is a temporary church called St. George's in the Wood, which is attached to the vicarage of St. Clements: also a Baptist chapel erected in 1875. Here is a natural seltzer spring said to possess valuable medicinal properties. The greater portion of Boscombe is included in the district of the Bournemouth Improvement Commissioners who are the authorities in sanitary and other matters. Here is a branch home of the sisters of Bethany, where about 100 orphan girls are trained for domestic service.

SPRINGBOURNE is about half a mile from Bournemouth east rallway station. The Wesleyans erected a chapel in BRAMLEY is a parish and pleasant village 5 miles north from Basingstoke, 4 south from Mortimer station, on the Basingstoke and Reading branch of the Great Western railway and 51 from London, in the Northern division of the county, hundred, petty sessional division, union and county court district of Basingstoke, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Basingstoke north-eastern division: a feeder of the river Loddon traverses the parish. The church of St. James is an ancient structure: the old doorway, long walled up, but now visible on the interior, is of the Norman or Transition period; it was discovered in 1874 and above it, beneath the plaster, was found a very ancient and interesting freeco painting of the murder of Thomas à Becket, assigned to as early a date as the thirteenth century; there are also other remnants of freeco painting, which seems to have originally covered the whole of the in-terior walls: the present windows date from the Perpendicular period: the chancel is of the same breadth and height as the nave and is separated from it by a Perpendicular rood-screen; showe this stood, at the time of the Reformation, a rood or image and a rood-loft, removed in 1573: the tion, a root or image and a root-lot, removed in 1675: the original steeple or beliry was replaced in 1636-40 by the present square brick tower, which contains 5 belis of the same period: in the south side is a private chapel, which contains a handsome recumbent marble monument (by Sanks) to Bernard Brocas: there are mural tablets to Dr. Shaw, the celebrated Oriental traveller, and likewise Lough and Green, former vicars: there are also several fine trasses. The register dates from 1580, and the churchwardens' account books from 1528. The living is a vicarsge, the great and small tithes are commuted at £510 and £150 respectively: the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford, are patrons of the living and impropriators of the great titles and grant a beneficial lease of the same, with the rectory house, to the vicar for the time being: the Rev. Charles Eddy M.A. late fellow and tutor of that college, is the vicar. The Duke of Wellington, who is lord of the manor, Mrs. Broas of Beaurepaire, and Queen's College, Oxford, are the chief landowners. The soil is chiefly said and clay; sabsoil, sand and clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans, cats and barley. The area is 2,255 acros; rateable value, £3,350; the population in 1871 was 489.

BRANSGORE is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1874 of rich flowers and exotics in profusion; the present profrom the parishes of Christchurch and Sopley, in the Southern division of the county, hundred, union and county court district of Christchurch, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Fordingbridge western division, 111 miles from London, 6 south from Ringwood, 4 north-east from Christchurch and 3 south-west from Holling and Christchurch and 3 south-west from Holling and Christophical C norm-east from Unristchurch and 3 south-west from Holmesley stations on the London and South Western railway. The church of St. Mary, erected in 1822, in the Later English style, has been entirely restored and enlarged, at a cost of £1,200, and the church re-easted: it consists of nave and apsidal chancel: three stained windows (the gift of J. Henry Dart esq. of Beech House), representing the Birth, Death and Resurrection of our Lord, have been placed in it. The register dates from the year 1822. The living is Death and Resurrection of our Lord, have been placed in it. The register dates from the year 1822. The living is a vicarage, now of the yearly value of £230, having been augmented in 1876 by J. Henry Dart esq. with residence, in the gift of trustees, and held by the Rev. Francis Frederick McGlynn M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. The parsonage house, a brick building near to the church, was erected in 1844 and is well sheltered. The Wesleyans have a small beauthous Beauth Haves the residue of Henry Dart etc. chapel here. Beech House, the residence of J. Henry Dart esq.

J.P. is pleasantly situated on an eminence, surrounded by woods: it was built in the reign of Charles II. and enlarged in the beginning of the present century: the principal entrance is by the west front: to the right is the handsome library, on the left is the spacious dining-room; in the south-east wing is the drawing-room, richly decorated: the grounds and lawns are to the east, where there are varieties greens and commanding extensive views. Harrow Lodge, the modern residence of Wm. Percy Jesson esq. is on a gentle ominence, having within sight the Dorsetshire hills on the west, also the Catherine hills and Heron Court and to the south the Isle of Wight and the Needles. J. Henry Dorsets on his the original lendows. Dart esq. J.P. is the principal landowner. The soil is gravel and elay, and in some parts yields good crops of wheat, barley and oats. Some of the inhabitants work here in brick making which is carried on to some extent, but the greater part are employed in agriculture. The population in 1879 was 1,050.

BREAMORE is a liberty, parish and village and station on the Salisbury and Dorset railway, 8 miles south from Salisbury and 3 north from Fordingbridge, on the west bank of the Avon, in the Southern division of the county, on the Wiltshire border, hundred, union and county court district of Fordingbridge. The living being a donative, it is not under epi-copal jurisdiction, but it is locally contained within under episcopal jurisdiction, but it is locally contained within the diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and the rural deanery of Fordingbridge western division. Breamore is several times named in Domesday Book, and was formerly the site of a priory, which anciently stood upon the bank of the Avon, near to the mill, which is itself mentioned in Domesday. A few stone coffins, long since removed to the church, ard, and a base or capital here and there, in cottage gardens, are the only traces remaining of the priory buildings. The parish church of St. Mary dates from a much earlier period than the dissolved priory, some portions of the present structure being of Early Norman architecture, and features exist which indicate a still earlier foundation : it consists of a chancel, nave and central tower: the chancel was restored in 1874 by the present rector: there is a very ancient porch at the south-west end of the church, with a ancient porch at the south-west end of the church, with a chamber over it (now closed), in which are the remains of some frescoes: near the porch is a yenerable yew tree, which is probably from 800 to 1,000 years old. The register dates from the year 1675. The living is a donative, and is held with South Charford; the tithes are commuted at £714; the present patron and rector is the Rev. Edward Parker Dew M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. The manor of Breaters with the second to the head of the second to the second t more, which formerly belonged to the priory, has been held for many generations by the family of Hulse, now represented by Sir Edward Hulse bart. D. L. of Breamore House. This mansion is a large and handsome building, in the Elizahethan style, almost entirely modern, and replaces one of similar style, which was burnt October 19th, 1856: it stands in a park of 137 acres and is backed by woods, which skirt the Salisbury downs: near the house is a curious maze or labyrinth, some centuries old. The soil of the parish is loam; subsoil, gravel. There is a large common with grazing land on Breamore downs. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 3,440 acres; rateable value, £4,542; the population in 1871 was 586.

SOUTH CHARPORD is 14 miles north from Breamore, and the same south of Downton; it is an ancient parish, mentioned in Domesday as "Cher.leford." From an ancient MS. service book, now in the British Museum [Bibl. Reg. xxi.], and which was given to South Charford by Sir John xxi.], and which was given to South Charford by Sir John Popham in 1403, it appears that a parochial church and graveyard were dedicated for this parish on the feast of St. Agnes, 1404, by Nicholas, Bishop of Christopolis, a suffragan bishop of Wells diocese, who was acting under the authority of Archbishop Arundel, during a vacancy in the see of Winchester. The church was built at the expense of Sir John Popham, who was lord of the manor of Charford, and with the consent of John London, at that time prior of Breamore. Not a stone of the church is now visible, but some mounds near Charford farmhouse are supposed to cover its ruins. That portion of the parish which lies on the east bank of the river Avon is annexed to the living of Hale; that on the river Avon is annexed to the living of Hale; that on the western bank pays tithes commuted at £162 15s. to the patron of Breamore. The area is 863 acres; rateable value £1,121; the population in 1871 was 78.

CHRISTCHURCH.

CHRISTCHURCH is a market and union town, scaport and parliamentary borough, and station on the branch from Ringwood of the London and South Western railway, called Ringwood of the London and South Western railway, caneu the Ringwood, Christchurch and Bournemouth railway, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of the same name, Ringwood petty sessional division, diocese and archedeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Fordingbridge western division, 112 miles from London, 24 south-west from Southampton, 10 west from Poole, and 9 south from Ring-

The harbour of Christchurch, now blocked up by sand-banks and shoals, has this peculiarity—that there is high water twice every tide: this arises from its position in rela-tion to the Isle of Wight and various points of land on the coast, particularly that on which Hurst Castle is situated.

The Avon is crossed by two bridges, one of five, the other of three arches. Mention of the town, however, is first met with about the year 900, in the account given by the Saxon chronicler of the contest for the crown between Edward the Bider and his kinsman Ethelwald in 901; the latter having collected troops to support his pretensions, marched to Wimborne, in Dorsetshire, of which place he took possession, and afterwards continued his progress to Tweones, or Twynham (now called Christchurch), which he also captured; Edward hastened to attack his rival, who, on his approach retreated to Wimborne, whence he shortly afterwards fled in the night, and escaped to Northumberland. It is stated by the historians Stowe and Speed, that Hengist, the English conqueror, effected his second invasion of Britain at Hengistbury Head, a promontory one mile south of Christchurch, and at this In Domesday Survey it is described as a burgh and royal Cambridge. manor, under the name of Thuinam, containing 31 men-suages. The town was fortified in the reign of Henry I. by Richard de Redvers, Earl of Devon, who also erected the castle, the ruins of the keep of which, on the summit of an artificial mound, are of prodigious strength; the walls, which still remain, are more than ten feet thick.

The Corporation of Christchurch is prescriptive, and not included in the Municipal Corporations' Act: it consists of a mayor, elected by scot and lot, on the 14th September—the mayoralty commencing at the Michaelmas court-leet of the lard of the manor—and sixteen burgesses. The town is the lord of the manor—and sixteen burgesses. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates. This borough regularly sent two members to parliament until the passing of the Reform Act, since which it has returned but one: by the Boundary Act, passed in 1892, the chapelry of Holdenhurst was included in the parliamentary borough. The corporate borough is much less extensive than the parliamentary: it takes its name from the church, but was known to the old English by the name of Twyncham-Bourne, from its situation at the confluence of the rivers Avon and Stour, which together fall into the sea at Christ-church bay. church bay.

The town is pleasantly situated: it consists of one broad line of street, called the High street, Church street, Castle street, and the subarbs of Purewell, Bargates and the Barrack road. The streets are lighted with gas: the works, situate at Purewell, were established in 1852, at a cost of £2.000

Here, on the banks of the Avon, are the majestic remains of the ancient priory.

The present church was the collegiate church of the priory, which was so ancient that there are no authentic records of its original establishment: according to Camden it was founded in early English times, on the ruins of an ancient heathen temple: the inmates of the priory were secular canons of the Order of St. Augustine; and in the secular canons of the Order of St. Augustine; and in the reign of Edward the Confessor there was a prior and 24 canons: William Rafus bestowed the church and convent on Ralph Flambard, afterwards Bishop of Durham, who, on his elevation to the deanery, rebuilt the church, about the year 1675, on an enlarged scale, and dedicated it to Christ: on the diagrace of the Bishop they were granted by Henry I. to Baldwin, son of Richard de Redvers, who procured a change of the order from secular to regular on anous and change of the order from secular to regular canons, and introduced a certain number of the latter, and placed them under the government of a prior: at the Dissolution the annual revenue of the priory was £544 6s. according to Speed, £317 7s. 9d. according to Dugdale: the church was then granted to the inhabitants by Henry VIII. for a parochial church: the church displays considerable portions of the work of Bishop Flambard; in its general design it comprehends a nave and sisles, a transept, with chapels or chantries projecting eastwards, a choir and its aisles, a lady chapel, built in 1898, by Lady Alice West, a western tower and a capacious north porch: the nave is western tower and a capacious norm porch: the nave is formed by a double row of massive square pillars, ornamented with demi-columns, and semi-circular ornamental arches springing between them from grouped pilasters; this sconsidered one of the most perfect specimens in England of the style of Norman architecture: the north transept, though much altered, displays evident proofs of the Norman style: the chancel and the whole of the eastern portion of the building are more modern than the transept and nave: the windows are lavge and ornamental, and the vaulting is handsome: in the choir are the stalls and seats of the priory handsome: in the choir are the stalls and seats of the priory establishment; these are ornamented with carvings of a most grotesque description: this church contains a magnificent ancient sculptured altarplece, representing the root and branch of Jesse; the figures, foliage, and architecture are combined with happy effect: there are many curious and interesting tombs and monumental effigies in different parts of the building; one to Margaret de-la-Pole, Countess of Salisbury, eb. 1541; one by Sir Francis Chantrey to Mrs. Barnis; another, by Flaxman, to Viscountess Fitzharris, representing that lady instructing her infant sous in the Scriptures; and near to the western entrance is a handsome marble monument to the poet Percy Bysshe Shelley, erected by his son, Sir Percy Shelley, bart, of Boscombe House. The register dates from the year 1584. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £380, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester and held by

A small Baptist chapel was erected in 1875.

The Congregational chapel is a large building, having extensive school rooms attached. Here is a Congregational day school for 140 hoys and 90 girls; also an infant school, in which there are 70 children. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship.

The Cemetery, opened in 1858, is about half a mile west of the town; there are two handsome Gothic mortuary

The Town Hall is in High street, and contains rooms for petty sessions, which are held on the second and last Mondays in every month, and for all parochial matters.

The chief manufacture carried on here is that of watch and clock fuzee chains and hooks, which gives employment to many hands: the London, Birmingham and Liverpool watch and clock makers are almost exclusively supplied Some employment is also derived from the from here. fishery; a little coasting trade is carried on; malting and a couple of small breweries. Ironstone is found in great abundance.

Markets were formerly held here on Mondays, but are now discontinued.

The Barracks are situated half a mile west of the town. The Police station in Bargates is a branch of the Hants County constabulary, and has a temporary lock-up for prisoners previous to their being taken to Winchester.

In connection with the church are several charities. Clingan's gift, for apprenticing poor boys of Christchurch, has an income of £134; the Magdalene charity, formerly a hospital for lepers, income £43, now distributed in charity to the poor; Admiral Brown's gift, income £74, a portion of which is distributed to the poor of this parish. There are other charities of various characters, the yearly income of which is about £80.

A newspaper, entitled the "Christchurch Times," is published every Saturday morning.
Salmon are caught in the rivers Avon and Stour.

The King's Arms Hotel is much frequented by nobility and gentry in the fishing season: from its balcony can be perceived the Needles, south-east: in the opposite grounds are the ruins of the old castle and priory.

Warren Hill overlooks the sea, and at its base is a heautiful beach, with southern aspect, well sheltered from a northern breeze; from here, in the vicinity of Tuckton, are extensive views by land and sea.

The mansion erected by Gustavus Brander esq. on the site of the ancient priory was the residence, in 1807, of the late Louis Philippe

The principal landowners are the Earl of Malmesbury, who is lord of the manor, Sir G. R. M. Tapps Gervis Meyrick bart, and the trustees of the late Sir G. Rose bart.

The area is 21,448 acres of land; rateshle value, £64.436 11s. 5d.; the population of Christchurch parish in 1871 was 9,475 (which includes part of Bournemouth); of the parliamentary borough, 15,415; and of the old town, 2.094.

Stanpit is a hamlet, half a mile east.

SOMERFORD is 1½ miles east; Bure, 2 miles east; Stourfield, 2 miles south-west.

Hurn and East Parley are small hamlets in the parish, 3 miles north-west from Christchurch, situated on the river Stour. At East Parley is a small school church, crected in 1868 and served by the clergy of St. Peter, Bournemouth. There is also a small Baptist chapel. In the vicinity is Heron Court, the seat of the Earl of Malmesters and the statement of the Court of the Earl of Malmesters and the seat of bury P.C. noted for its paintings and flower gardens: the library contains the valuable collection of books formed by James Harris esq. author of "Hermes," and ancestor of the present Barl: this noble residence is situated near to the river Stour, and in the midst of thick woods and plantations in the light of the present learning and the state of the present learning and the present le richly interspersed with the Portugal laurel and rhododendrons.

Tuckton and Wick, together form a tithing of Christchurch. The former is I mile south-west and the latter is a quarter of a mile south.

CRONDALL (or CRONDELL) is a large village and extensive parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Crondell, Odiham petty sessional division, Harrley Wintney union, Parniam county court district, diocese and archdesconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Odiham, 4 miles west-north-west from Parnham and 45 from London, and is divided into four tryings, and is divided into four tryings, and is divided into four tryings. and is divided into four tythings—viz. Crookham, Crondall and Swanthorps, Dippenhail and Ewshott. The church of All Saints is a large handsome edifice in the Norman style, advancing to Early English, consisting of chancel and nave, with massive brick tower at the east end; the interior is a with massive brick tower at the east end; the interior is a beautiful specimen of Norman architecture; it was restored in 1845, at a cost of nearly £1,900, and again repaired in the year 1871, at a cost of £800. The register dates from the year 1567. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £568, in the gift of St. Cross Hospital, Winchester, and held by the Rev. William Dann Harrison M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford, who is also vicar of and resides at South Stoneham.

The Par Charles Investment Stocke M. a of Clara College. The Rev. Charles Drummond Stooks M.A. of Clare College, Cambridge, is the curate in charge. The rectorial tithes, commuted at £1,963 a year, are now under the control of the trustees of St. Cross Hospital, Winchester. Here are Congregational and Bible Christian chapels. Elizabeth Congregational and Bible Christian chapels. Elizabeth Oliver, housekeeper to Henry Maxwell eq. of Ewahott House, gave a sum, which at present amounts to £1,238 lbs. 2d. £3 per C-nt. Consols, for the purpose of educating boys of the poor inhabitants of the parish; Mr. Maxwell also gave a building to be used as the school-room. Andrews' charity of £16 lbs. yearly is for clothing. Here is much hop land, for which an extra charge of 13s. 4d. an aere adds £111 to the vicarial rent-charge. The parish is rich in antiquarian interest. In the "Codex Diplom." vol. iii. is found the Saxon charter of King Edgar, anno 976, granting the lands of Crondell to the church of St. Peter, Winchester, the present cathedral. An ancient encampment exists at Barley Pound, near to which the foundations of a Roman villa were discovered some years ago, and a tesselated pave-ment since destroyed, but which was of considerable beauty. At the south-east extremity of the parish, on the edge of Ewshott Heath, is Cessar's camp, with a double ditch and most commanding creiline: across the valley of Boarley the opposite bluff has on it the foundations of an old beacon, and is thence called Beacon Hill. In the year 1828, a most rare and interesting collection of gold coins, of the Merovingian and other early French mints, was found near Hampton Gutter by the late C. E. Lefroy esq. of Ewshott House, and are now deposited in the Kensington Museum: they may be conjectured to have been dropped in a purse (of which some of the ornaments were also found at the same time) by some traveller on his way from our southern coast to London, perhaps as long ago as the sixth or seventh century. Three public-houses of the sign of the 'Horns,' in this part of the parish, show the proximity, in times gone by, of the deer of the royal forests. The Bishops of Winchester claim a right of free warren over some of the lands of the parish. Clure Park is the seat of Major George Francis Birch J.P. situated Park is the seat of Major George Francis Birch s.P. stuated 1 mile from the village. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. The diocese of Winehester has 163-acres in the parish. The principal landowners are the Crown, Charles James Maxwell Lefroy esq. Major Birch, Mesars. Andrews, Johnston, Chaundler, Smither and Atty. The parish of Crondall comprises a great variety of soils, from the Bagshot sands of Crookham and Ewshott to the chalk and clays of the other tithings. The land in cultivation is light; subsoil, sand, gravel and chalk. The crops are a succession of grain; hope are also extensively cultivated. The area is 9,741 acres; rateable value, £15,177, including the above tithings; the population in 1871 was 2,866—viz. | Crookham, 969; Crondall and Swanthorpe, 997; Dippenhall, 291 and Ewshott, 609.

Parish Clerk, Isaac Cranstone.

DUMMER is a parish and village 5 miles south-west from Basingstoke, 51 from London and 13 from Winchester, in the Northern division of the county, petty sessional division, union, highway district and county court district of Basingstoke, hundred of Bermondspit, diocese and arch-deaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Basingstoke south-western division. The church of All Saints dates from the 13th century, and probably stands on the site of the earlier church which we learn from Domesday Book the earlier church which we learn from Domesday Book existed in 1068; it consists of a chancel and nave, with western porch, the latter of the 15th century, and square wooden beliry, containing 5 bells of good tone; the pulpit of carved oak is also of the 15th century, and is supposed to be the oldest in the county: the hagioscope, affording a view of the altar from the northern sisle, and a curious baldachino or canopy immediately to the west of the chancel-arch which because the received the chancel arch which were considered to the chancel arch which we cannot be considered to the chancel arch which we are reproved at formerly covered the rood or crucifix, which was removed at the Reformation, also date from the same century : traces of the rood-loft can be plainly seen, both where it was fixed into the north and south walls, and also from the finials below, the chancel-arch having been cut away to make room for it: in the church are some curious brasees; one records in Leonine or rhymed Latin verse the memory of William Dummer and Ellen, his wife, both of whom would appear to have died in 1427. This William was the lady's second husband; he seems to have assumed her maiden name on his husband; he seems to have assumed her maiden name on his marriage, his previous name having been Farley (doubtless from the neighbouring parish of that name), she being heiress of Dummer and lady of that manor: by her first husband, Sir Nicholas Atte More, she was the ancestress of a line of Attemores or Dummers which ended in William Atte More, alias. Dummer, who died in 1593 without surviving issue and who lies buried within the Communion rails, beneath a stone whereon is a brass in beautiful preservation, inscribed with his arms and a curious English rhymed epitaph, while with his arms and a curious Engusa rhymeu epuapu, wane in the adjacent wall his effigy appears, together with that of his wife and infant son who died before him: with him the long line of Dummer of Dummer who had held the lordship of the manor from the reign of Heary I. (more than 400 years) ended, and the estates passed to the Millingate family, and again about the end of the 17th century to the Terrys, who held them till 1864. The register dates from 1540. The living is a rectory, value £417, with 80 acres of glebe and a residence, and is in the gift of Borlase H. Adams esq. and held by the Rev. Sir William Dunbar bart, s.c. L. of esq. and held by the Rev. Sir William Dunbar bart, s.c.L. of Hertford College, Oxford. Here is a Prinitive Methodist chapel, built in 1862 and enlarged in 1867. The school, originally founded by John Millingate esq. in 1610 was rebuilt in 1815, enlarged in 1846 when a teachers' residence was added, and again enlarged in 1870: it has two endowments amounting to £14 a year. There is also in this parish an endowment of £1 founded in 1606 by the Rev. William Marriott, the then rector, for the purchase of 3 Bibles, to be given away on Easter Monday, and others for £3 a year for Marriott, the then rector, for the purchase of 3 Bibles, to be given away on Easter Monday, and others for £2 a year for the relief of the poor. The Rev. George Whitfield, the friend and coadjutor of John and Charles Wesley, had temporary charge of this parish, and here Hervey wrote his Meditations. The manor house, the ancient seat of the Dummer family, stands near the church, embosomed in trees: the thickness of the well attents the company of the well attents the sear of the well attents the sear of the probability. of its walls attests its age, and parts of it are probably as old as the 14th century, though it has received frequent additions: it was sold by the Terry family together with a considerable part of the parish in 1864 to the Rev. T. J. Torr, and again 10 years later to Sir Nelson Rycroft bart.; Richard Cary Riwes esq. is the present occupier. Sir Nelson Rycroft bart. is lord of the manor and principal landowner, the other landowners being the Rev. T. J. Torr and Borlase H. Adams esq. The soil is clay, with a subsoil of chalk: the chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 2,669 acres, of which about 120 are wood; the rateable value is £2,757; and the population in 1871 was 325. The tything of Kempshott a detached part of the parish of Winslade and Kempshott, with an area of 555 acres, rateable value £653, and a of its wails attests its age, and parts of it are probably as old shott, with an area of 555 acres, rateable value £653, and a population of about 100, has been added to Dummer for civil purposes, under the provisions of the Divided Parishes Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vic. cap. 61). Acting Parish Clerk, William Willis.

FAREHAM.

FARBHAM (called in Domesday Book Fernham) is a market, railway and union town, seaport, situated at the head of a drep inlet of the sea, forming the western branch of Portsmouth Harbour, extensive parish and a polling place for the Southern division of the county, in the hundred and division of its name, county court district of Portsmouth, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Alverstoke, 84 miles from London, 9 north from Portsmouth, 173 south from Winchester, 18 west from Chichester and 19 courth court four Southernton. 12 south-south-east from Southampton.

Fareham anciently sent members to Parliament, but petitioned to be excused, on account of the expense, about the reign of King Edward the Third. The government is vested in a Board of Health, comprising a chairman and eight members.

The town consists principally of one street, about a mile in length, running east and west, the High street diverging from the main street towards the north; there are several other good streets, the most favourite for the residences of private families being the Osborn road and Southampton road, running parallel with Osborn road. The town is well drained, lighted with gas and supplied with pure water, and the streets macadamised and flagged.

The railways are the London and South Western, Gosport junction line and the other branch of the South Western by which communication with Chichester, Brighton and the South Coast is given by means of the junction branch to Coebam, a few miles from here; at the east end of the town this line is carried over the extreme end of Portsmouth Harbour by a lofty viaduct of 17 brick arches. The railway station is at the west end of the town, on the Titchfield road, and this station is the most convenient for the town of Titchfield and neighbourhood.

In 1812 the ancient parish cliurch of St. Peter was, with the exception of the chancel and tower, pulled down, and the present plain brick building erected; it has chancel, nave and tower with 6 bells: the interior is fitted with galleries. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £530, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev.

Walter Scott Dumergue M.A. of Corpus Christi college. Cambridge.

The register dates from the year 1834. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £100, in the gift of the present Lady Thompson and held by the Rev. Frederick Smith B.A. of St. Catharine's College, Cambridge. The population of this district in 1871 was 2,821.

was 2,521.

In 1737 William Price, by his will, left property to the present value of £500 a year, for the support of a school to clothe and educate 30 children, which school is called "Price's, or the Blue School;" and in the year 1842 the schoolhouse and master's residence were rebuilt. The remainder of the fund is distributed to widows.

Here is a Catholic chapel; also Wesleyan and Congregational chapels.

The Town Hall is the private property of Mr. Henry Gilbert and is used for concerts and exhibitions.

A Market Hall has been erected on a site belonging to Price's Charity, by free subscription. The market is held on alternate Mondays.

Here is a police station, also the Magistrates' room, where the petty sessions are held fortnightly.

There are public salt-water baths in Bath lane. An iron water fountain, presented to the town by Thomas Burrell esq. of this town, is on the quay.

Fareham is the head quarters of the 7th Hants Rifle Volunteers, and there is a fire brigade, with an engine establishment.

The Hants County Lunatic Asylum, at Knowle, in this parish, about 3 miles north-north-west of the town, was built in 1852, and has been considerably enlarged: it has a dining hall to hold 500 patients, and a chapel has been erected in the vicinity of the building to seat the same number of inmates; the farm consists of about 190 acres of land, | and there are commodious farm buildings.

The late Mr. Thomas Stares, of Wallington, introduced here the manufacture of coarse pottery: the west and other parts of England, the Channel islands, and a portion of the Continent, are supplied from this town with red pottery.

There is an extensive steam flour mill; several malting establishments, a large tan yard, and several brick and tile yards.

Ships of 300 tons burthen are enabled to arrive at the quays. The exports consist principally of oak, timber, bark, hoops, red pottery, and bricks. There is a Custom House establishment at Portland street.

The Capital and Counties Bank, formerly known as the Hampshire Banking Company, has a branch establishment in West street.

The chief hotel is the "Red Lion" for families and commercial gentlemen, and it has a posting establishment attached.

A portion of the parish is situated on an eminence, commanding a fine sea view.

Here are several handsome seats, amongst which may be mentioned Uplands, the residence of George A. Huddart esq.; Roche Court, situated about a mile to the north of the town, the residence of Captain Arthur Southey; Fleet-

FAWLEY is a parish and village, and includes several hamlets in the Southern division of the county, union of New Forest, Dibden liberty, Sonthampton petty sessional division and county court district, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Fawley, 11 miles south east from Totton station, 94 from London, 5 south from Hythe, 8 south-south-east from Southampton by water and 15 by land, situated on a creek of the Southampton Water, and has a quay. The church of All Saints is an ancient stone structure, in the Norman and Early English styles: it has nave and aislee, square tower and 4 bells, and a fine Norman arch at the west door, and is said to be one of the four churches which were in existence when the New Forest Hoare M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, who is also rural dean. Here are two chapels, one for Baptists at Blackfield Common, and one for Weeleyan Methodists. This parish possesses much natural beauty and romantic scenery. Mary Trattle's charity of £28 18s. 11d. yearly, founded by will in 1857, is for beef and clothing. Cadland House, the seat of Edgar Atheling Drummond esq. L. is a larger white brick manaion, standing on a gentle D.L. is a large white brick mansion, standing on a gentle eminence in an extensive and finely wooded park, about a eminence in an extensive and finely wooded park, about a mile north of the village of Fawley, on the banks of the western ahore of the Southampton Water, from which are obtained delightful views as far as Spithead and the Needles: the house was built in the year 1793, but in 1836 was clarge! and improved by the late Mr. Andrew Robert Drummond, at a cost of over £400,000: the whole of the very extensive offices are below the surface line of the surrounding pleasure was made: it was repaired in 1840 and in 1866, when the tower was restored. The register dates from the year 1690.

The living is a rectory, yearly value £879, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. Arthur Malortie grounds. The park, including in all, 500 acres, is very ma-dulating and picture que: the Cadland estate extends from Dibden to Lepe, and has about 15 miles of river frontage, and contains above 200 labourers' cottages besides other residences. Eaglehurst, belonging to Mr. Drummond, and leased to Count Edmund Batthyany, is rather a strangely built massion, with views and situation altogether unique. Before the purchase of the Osborne estate, Eaglehurst was selected as the future marine residence of Her Majesty the Queen, but the negotiations fell through. As Rear Commenders of the Rean Labourt Veckst Club Count Batthyang. modore of the Royal Albert Yacht Club, Count Batth any has selected this spot as his soldence, and it is universally has selected this spot as his residence, and it is universally admitted that a more delightful or appropriate site could not well be found. The land is mostly freehold: the copyhold being here under the maness of Cadland and Bitterne, of which Edgar Atheling Drummened esq. is lord. Until about the year 1866 these was a piece of land called the floating island, in area about 3 acres, with trees 25 to 30 feet high growing upon it, which used at certain seasons to float to and fre: but this floating expacity las been checked, indeed entirely stopped, by draining the surrounding hog, hence the trees have taken root, and the whole mass is made stationary. The principal landswarers are Hans Sloane Stanley esq. and E. A. Drummond esq. The soil is light sandy; subsoil, gravelly. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 6,362 acres; rateable value, £9,821; the population in 1871 was 1,896,06 which 6r3 are in Hythe, which see. which see.

FLEET was formed into an ecclesiastical parish in 1863 out of the parishes of Crondall, Elyetham and Yateley: it is 6 miles north-east from Odiham, 11 east from Basingstoke, with a station on the South Western railway, in the Northern with a station on the South Western railway, in the Northern division of the county, county court district of Farnham, Ociham rural deanery and Winchester archdeaconry and diocese. The church of All Saints, on Crookham common, is a good example of building in red brick, with lofty, well proportioned interior, relieved by extensive coloring; it is built in the style of the 13th century, with many of the details used in continental churches of that period; the porch or cloister is a continuous one along the whole front of the church and forms a peculiar and effective feature: it has also apsidal charcel, nave and aisles: the late C. E. Lefroy esq. and family contributed largely towards its erection and endowment. The register dates from the year 1863. The living is a perpetual curacy, yearly value £250, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. William Henry Plummer B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The Baptists have a chapel here. The Fleet pond or lake covers about 180 acres and is the property of the Crown. The parish is traversed by the Basingstoke canal. The common here, which is extensive, has recently been laid out by the proprietor, Mr. H. J. E. Brake, of Farnboreugh, for building purposes, and contains many hundred lots; many of the sites overlook the lake and command extensive views of the surrounding country, including Alderextensive views of the surrounding country, including Aldershot Camp. The population in 1871 was 381.

FORDINGBRIDGE is a union and county court town, parish and station of the South Western railway, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of the same name, Ringwood petty sessional division, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Fordingbridge western division, 7 miles north from Ringwood station and 97 from London by rail. The town is lighted with gas, and is pleasantly situated on the Upper Avon, chiefly on the west bank and near the borders of the New Forest, and is nearly midway between Salisbury and Christchurch. In Domesday Book the town is mentioned under the name of Forde, and is stated to have contained a church and two mills. The church of St. Mary consists of a nave, with aisles and two chancels north and south; the latter used as such and the other occupied by seats: the north chancel is considered the most ancient part of the huilding, and is attributed to the thirteenth century: the church has a fine embattled square three this century: the cluren has a fine embatted square tower, with clock and 6 bells: the entire building was completely restored in 1841: there is a brass tablet to the memory of William Buikley esq. and Jane, his wife, three sons and five daughters, and two stained windows to the memory of Major Brice and his widow. The register dates from 1642. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Ibsley annexed, joint yearly value £975, with residence, in the gift of King's College, Cambridge, and held by the Rev. William James Boys M.A. late fellow of that college. Here are Congregational, Wesleyan and Catholic chapels, and the Friends have a meeting house here. The Oddfellows' Hall, erected in 1879, is a Gothic building of red brick; there is a large room in the rear for concerts and lectures; in the centre of the front a clock has been fixed, by public subscription. A market, formerly held on Friday, is now discontinued. An annual fair is held on the 9th of September. A police station was erected in 1857. There are several good inns in the town: the Greybound is the principal posting house. In the neighbourhood are the remains of several ancient encampments, the principal of which are at Godshill. There are some very good residences in the parish. Burgate tower, with clock and 6 bells: the entire building was comcampments, the principal of which are at Godshill. There are some very good residences in the parish. Burgate House, the seat of John Coventry esq. is pleasantly situated on the Avon; Packham House, the handsome residence of the late Mrs. Bannerman, is west of the town, on an eminence, and commands some extensive views of the surrounding country. St. John's, a very old residence, east of the town, is, with its manorial rights, the property of and vested in the trustees of the Hospital of St. Cross. Charles P. Brune esq. is lord of the manor. A considerable trade is carried on in the spinning of flax and the manufacture of salicloth and canvas, giving employment to about 200 hands: here is also canvas, giving employment to about 200 hands: here is also a brewery. The principal landowners are C. P. Brune esq. John Coventry esq. Byre Coote esq. and Sir Edward Hulse bart. The soil is of a mixed character; subsoil, gravel, clay, sand &c. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, turnips and roots. The town contains 543 acres; the entire parish, 6,339; rateable value, £14,837; in 1871 the population of the town was 837, that of the parish, 3,050.

BICTON is a hamlet in this paris, a mile south-east from the town, containing 540 acres.

BURGATE is a hamlet and tithing in this parish, a mile north from the town, on the road to Salisbury, containing 859 acres and 346 inhabitants. John Coventry esq. is lord of the manor.

FORTON is a hamlet and ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1841 from the civil parish of Alversteke, in the Southern in 1841 from the civil parish of Alverstake, in the Southern division of the county, liberty and incorporation of Alverstoke, Portsmouth county court district, Fareham petty sessional division, diocese and archideacoury of Winchester and rural deanery of Alverstoke, on the old road to Southampton, from which place it is 16 miles south-east, 1 north from Gosport, 1½ by steam launch and 14 miles round the harbour north-west from Portsmouth by road and 90 from London. The church of St. John the Evangelist was received about the year 1839; it is of briefs in the Pointed erected about the year 1830; it is of brick, in the Pointed style, having two square towers and clock. In 1871 the in-terior of the church was greatly improved by removing the side galleries, re-scating the whole with open benches and removing the screen, so as to open out the east end, which was also raised: a new organ was erected at the same time and a new fout was placed near the west end; the sittings are all free. The register dates from the year 1841. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £290, in the gift of the rector of Alverstoke and held by the Rev. Charles Pierrepont Hutchinson M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here are barracks, which have been considerably enlarged and are now occupied by the Bayal Marines; also a large military prison, containing 150 ceils: contiguous to Brockhurst is an iron church for the use of the troops. There is a handsome chapel for Baptists; also a small Primitive Methodist chapel and a Baptist chapel at Brockhurst; and a Baptist meeting room at Camden Town; also a Mission Room, which will seat 400 persons. Thorngate's almshouses, 54 of which are situated at Cauden Town, removing the screen, so as to open out the east end, which Forton, and 10 at Brockhurst, were erected in 1867, some of which are exclusively devoted to single women and widows and the others for married couples not under 50 years of age. The soil is loam; subsoil, brick earth. The chief crops are grain and garden produce. The area is 1,000 acres; the population in 1871 was 6,022.

BROCKHURST is a hamlet, midway between Forton and Blson and partly in each district, having a station on the London and South Western tailway.

FREEMANTLE is a suburb of Southampton, from its a rectory, yearly value £300, with residence, in the gift which it is about 1 mile west. In 1851 it was a parated of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. John from the civil parish of Millbrook for ecclesiastical purposes;

D'Arcy Warcop Preston M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford. which it is about 1 mile west. In 1851 it was a-parated from the civil parish of Millbrook for ecclesissical purposes; its population then was limited to that of Freemantle Hall, its logges and a few scattered houses on the verge of the park. In 1852 the old hall was pulled down and the park was sold by the late Sir George Hewett bart. : its growth since that time has been continuous: pleasantly situated on the banks of the Southampton water, the land was soon covered with detached and semi-detached villas and oottages; it is in the Southern division of the county, Southampton county court district, South Stoneham union, Southampton rural deanery and Winchester archdeacoury and diocese. Christ Church was erected and a district assigned to it in 1830: the style is Geometrical Gothic and plan cruciform: the total cost about £5,000: it is a handsome building, and consists of chancel, nave, aisless and transepts, with a lofty tower and spire, added in 1874 by subscription; there is a fine stained window at the east end: it has 940 sittings, all free. The register dates from the year 1865. The living

FROXFIELD is a village and parish, pleasantly situated, 4 miles north-west from Petersfield, in the Parliamentary borough of Petersfield, Northern division of the county, hundred of Bast Meon, Petersfield union, petty sessional division and county court district, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Alton eastern division. The charch of St. Peter, erected at High Cross in 1862, by subscription, at a cost of £2,300, is in the Barly English or Pointed style and consists of chancel, nave, north alie and vestry: it is an interesting feature of the interior that the iers, capitals and arch stones of three of the arches were piers, capitals and arch stones of three of the arches were brought from the old building (which was at Froxfield Green) and reconstructed; they belong to the Norman period: there are 350 sittings, all free: the site was presented by John Silvester esq. who also contributed £300 to its erection: the late Joseph Martineau esq. of Basing Park, contributed £900: the chancel of the old church is now used as a mortnary chapel to the old burial ground, Froxfield Green, where interments still take place. The register dates from 1545. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £230, in the gift of the Bishop of Lichfield and held by the Rev. John Hosegood M.A. Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. Here is an endowed school for boys, income £30, and a National school for girls and infants. A small Wesleyan chapel was opened in September, 1851. There is running through this parish from south-east to north-west an embankment, which it is supposed formed part of the boundary which separated the kingdoms of Wessex and Sussex. On the site of a Roman encampment, aituate a mile south of the Green. Roman encampment, situate a mile south of the Green, several interesting remains have been discovered. Stoner

Diwns, is a lofty eminence, rising abruptly from the valley of Steep, overlooking a valley of very great extent. The whole of this parish is considerably above the surrounding country and abounds in picturesque views; the bold woody acclivities rising from the north side of the valleys, and the "upland lawns," are here called "hangers" (hanging woods), and in these sylvan heauties the hills on that side are remarkably rich. Basing Park, the seat of William Nicholson erg. J.P. extends over 450 acres of richly-wooded Nicholson eq. J.P. extends over 450 acres of richly-wooded land: the mansion, which is in the Grecian style, is approached from the London road through a long avenue of pines: near the park are extensive buildings for a model farm, erected by Mr. Nicholson. Broadhanger, the seat of Mrs. Greenwood, occupies an elevated situation, overlooking the hangers which sweep down into the vale of Langrish. Slade House is the seat of John Silvester esq. whose family have been residents in this parish since the time of Henry VIII. The Reclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the VIII. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are John Silvester esq. and William Nicholson esq. but many of the farmers own their land. The soil varies from a stiff clay to a light vegetable loam; sutsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 4,809 acres; rateable value, £1,177; and the population in 1871 was 663.

GOSPORT.

GOSPORT is a scaport and market and railway town and polling place for the Southern division of the county, in the parish of Alverstoke, hundred of Portsdown, Fareham petty parish of Alverstoke, hundred of Portsdown, Fareham petty sessional division, Postsmouth county court district, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Alverstoke and, although not incorporated, it is etyled, "the ancient town and borough of Gosport": it forms a chapelry in the parish of Alverstoke and is 901 miles from London, 224 from Winchester and 22 south-east from Southers non by well. Gesport next and berbeau see number Southers pton by rail. Gesport port and harbour are under the jurisdiction of the Pertsmouth Harbour Board; it the jurisdiction of the Pertsmouth Harbour Board; it was, 600 years back, but an insignificant village, consisting of a few fishing huts, and has risen to importance as an appendage to Portsmouth; it occupies a small peninsula on the opposite side of the harbour, projecting into its mouth to within half a mile of Portsmouth, and the transit to and fro is maintained by means of steam launches and a floating heiden of great proves for the convenience of the convenience. bridge of great power, for the conveyance of passengers, conches, waggons, cattle, and capable of conveying over 1,000 troops. Laties and children can embark and sisembark at all times of the tide, it being so constructed as to be always on a level with the shore. The steam launches and bridge depart from either side about every ten minutes.

Gosport is a well-built, handsome town, but appears to most advantage in the approach by water, as its finest buildings line the coast; besides these, it has a principal street, extending westward from the ferry, other parallel streets and several intersecting them. About a quarter of a mile from the town is the terminus of the Gosport and South Western railway, from which there is an additional extension for the convenience of her Majesty, for embarking and disembarking on board her yacht at the Royal Clarence yard; the South Western Company have also an additional branch railway to Stokes Bay (whence steamers communicate with the Isle of Wight), having stations at Stoke Road and Brockhurst, subarbs of Gosport.

Holy Trinity and St. Matthew are ecclesiastical parishes taken out of the civil parish of Alverstoke, the former formed in 1860 and the laster in 1845. The church of The Holy Trinity is of the Ionic order, the interior of which is very beautiful, but the external appearance is plain; the building is brick, with stucco dressings: an interior chancel has lately been formed and handsome choir stalls erected from designs by Hollyer, of Ryde: there are two stained windows in the sanctuary, representing the Adoration of the Incarnate God and the adoration of Christ by the Shepherds at the Nativity: the church was built in 1695, but has since been enlarged. The register dates from the year 1696. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200, in the gift of threstor of Alvertoke and held by the Rev. William Skippey Sanders M.A. of Excer College, Oxford. The population of this newish in 1871 was 9 632 of this parish in 1871 was 2,688.

St. Matthew's church is on the north side of the town, on a site called Barrackfield; the building is of stone, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave, and has 700 sittings free and unappropriated. The register dates from the year 1845. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £250; the rector and the Bishop of Winchester have the alternate right of presentation; the Rev. James Tanner M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford, is the viear. The area of St. Matthew's parish is 70 acres; the population in 1871 was 4,729.

There are Catholic, Congregational, Wesleyan and Baptist chapels.

The Market House is situated at the east end of High street, and contains also the armoury and drill room of the 6th Hants Rifle Volunteers, for which Gosport is the headquarters.

The county magistrates exercise jurisdiction in this towo. There are several broweries, ship yards and large yards for building yachts, and a considerable trade, chiefly in articles for the supply of the army and navy. The markets are held on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 4th of May and 10th of October.

The land side of the town is fortified from Weovill to the shore of Alverstoke lake by strong lines, bastions, reducted and counterscarps. Within the works, better known as the Royal Clarence Victualling Yard, are the cooperage, biscuit-baking department and an immense range of store-houses connected with those departments of the service. About a mile north is Porton lake, a large basin or creek of the harbour, which admits vessels of considerable burthen. On Priddy's Hard, north of this lake and connected with the harbour by a small cut through the sand is the strongly arched bomb-proof magazine fer powder. Near it are the ruins of Borough Castle, traditionally ascribed to King Stephen and now used as a drill ground, and for gunnery practice for H.M. ship "Excellent." On the same side is the military prison.

The Barracks, situated immediately within the lines, were commenced in the year 1857 and completed in 1859; they will hold a regiment of 1,000 men, with apacious quarters for their officers, non-commissioned officers and married men: the barracks are divided into separate blocks of huildings and extend from the end of North street to some distance beyond the gates of Clarence Victualling Yard, a frontage of more than a third of a mile in length.

The land here is defended from encroachments by the sea by a high and massive stone wall.

About a mile south of Graport, on the other side of Alverstoke lake, is Haslar Hespital, for sick and wounded seamen and rearines, for which the nation is indebted to the Barl of Sandwich, minister of George II.: it is arranged for 2.000 patients at one time, and is built on a piece of ground forwe scoon, and a lanatic asylum.

Three-quarters of a mile south-west from the hospital is Monchine Fort, a regular and very strong modern fortitics-im, from which 42 pieces of heavy ordnance may be brught to bear on an opposing force; this, together with a -trong redoubt farther west, and Fort Gilkicker, effectually secure the coast from the sea. North-west of Haslar and meriv called Haviar farm: It is a quadrangular building, near the extremity of the narrow alip of land which confines 1,000 feet in longth, with fine plasmes, having a small chapel the entrance of the harbour, is another battery and strong St. Luke's) and every requisite office attached. There is fort, called the Block House. There are likewise Fort two a success in the establishment, to which the public have the entrance of the harbour, is another battery and strong fort, called the Block House. There are likewise Fort Gomer and Brown Down buttery at Stokes Bay and also considerable forts at Rowner, Elson, Brockhurst and Grange, in the instance at rowner, case, broading sense transc.

The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the master. The population of the Local Board District in 1871 was 7,860.

BURROW, or Rat Island, is about a quarter of a mile from Gospart in Portsmouth harbour; it is the property of the Crown and had 7 inhabitants in 1871.

HAVANT is a market, union and railway town, parish, liberty and politing place for the Southern division of the county, in Parcham petty sessional division, Portsmouth county court district, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Havant, 661 miles by S. W. railway from London, 21 east-hy-south from Southampton, 28 south-east from Winchester, 7 north-north-east from Portsmouth, 9½ east from Fareham, 9 west from Chichester and 334 from Brighton, by rail 37½. The town, situated on the old road from Southampton and Fareham to Chichester, consists chiefly of four streets, but is gradually extending and improving. The London, Brighton and South Coast railway crosses North street, where a station has been erected, and there is a branch to Hayling. The direct Portsmouth line of the South Western here joins the South Coast railway. The town is governed by a Local Board. In 1824 railway. The town is governed by a Local Board. In 1824 a swing bridge was erected, at an expense of £12,000, across the channel which runs between Laugstone and Hayling island, lying about one mile to the south of Havant. The church of St. Faith is a handsome cruciform structure, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave and transepts, with a tower rising from the intersection: it has been recently rebuilt, except the chancel and turret, at a cost of from six to seven thousand pounds: in the tower is a bell-chamber containing 6 fine-toned bells: a stained east a beli-chamber containing 6 fine-toned bells: a stained east window has been added; an organ chamber and organ were also erected: in stripping and cleaning the chancel (the handsome groined ceiling of which, with the ribs, are all chalk, carried upon Purbeck pebbles), a beautiful Early English window of the thirteenth century built of chalk was discovered; likewise was found a window of the same century, looking north from the private chapel, which is now used as a vestry, as also one looking east; the two latter were completely hidden, but in the restoration have been left open: in taking down the tower several onenings from the timest taking down the tower, several openings from the turret were revealed, one leading to the rood loft and another from the transept to the turret and thence to the rood loft; a twolight lancet window was also discovered in the south transept and on the jambs were found frescoes, one representing the burning of a virgin martyr in a cauldron: various other interesting discoveries were made, including a single-light Norman window and a Purbeck marble font of the Saxons, with the figure of a griffin engraved upon it: the church was originally Norman, and at various times restored; it contains a handsome brass, in memory of the Rev. Thomas Aylward, and at the foot of the figure the words:—"Here lieth the Rev. Thomas Aylward, formerly rector of this church, who died 6th April, 1413, to whose soul may God be propitious, Amen. Be thou witness Christ that this stone doth not lie here that the body may be adorned, but that death may be an admonitor;" the plate is very handsome and beautifully engraved; the stone slab in which the plate is inserted has been removed from its original position and placed in the floor of the chancel. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, with manorial rights, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester, yearly value £670, with residence and 91 acres of glebe, and held by the Rev. William Renaud M.A. canon of Salisbury Cathedral and rural dean. In 1876 an iron church a single-light Norman window and a Purbeck marble font bury Cathedral and rural dean. In 1876 an iron church was erected in Brockhampton lane to hold about 250 was erected in Brockhampton lane to hold about 250 persons. St. Joseph's Catholic church, situated in West street, is a Gothic stone building, erected in 1874-5, with priest's residence and school buildings attached; it contains an elaborate marble altar piece, with scuiptured representations of the Marrisge of St. Joseph on the left, The Flight into Egypt on the right, and The Death of St. Joseph along the bottom, underneath the above; the altar piece is surmounted by three handsome stone pinnacles, and is 15 feet from the base to top of centre pinnacle. Here is a Congregational chapel. The cemetery of 1½ acres contains an elegant mortuary chapel, erected by a late rector the Rev. Thomas Goodwin Hatchard. Tanning, malting, brewing. Thomas Goodwin Hatchard. Tanning, malting, brewing, the coal and flour trades, and the manufacture of parchment, are the principal branches of business. In former ment, are the principal oranches of business. In former times the fishery in Langstone harbour used to be very productive, but it is now inconsiderable, except the oyster fishery, which is still of some extent. A town hall was erected in East street in 1870. A Working Men's Institute was erected in 1879 in West street, at the sole cost of Major-General Sir F. W. FitzWygram bart. of Leigh Park. A cattle and sheep market is held every alternate Tuesday, in the meadow at the back of the Star hotel. North street. A cattle and sheep market is held every alternate Tuesday, in the meadow at the back of the Star hotel, North street. Leigh Park, the seat of Major-General Sir Frederick Wellington FitzWygram bart. lord of the manor and principal landowner J.P. is a fine mansion, situate in its own grounds, which are of considerable extent and laid out with much taste. The soil is clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and roots. The area is 2,785 acres of land and 46 of tidal water: at tashle water is 18,792; the propulsition in 1821 water; rateable value, £13,927; the population in 1871 was 2,634, including coast guard.

St. John's ecclesiastical district was formed in 1840, and

ST. JOHN's ecclesiastical district was formed in 1840, and embraces the northern parts of the parishes of Havant and Warblington, including the hamlet of Durrants in the former and that part of the village of Rowland's Castle which is in the latter parish. Maize Copse farm, Prospect farm and Leigh farm are also included in this district. The church of St. John, situated at Reilhill, about 2½ miles north from Havant, is chiefly a flint building, and consists of small chancel, nave, transepts and two small aisles. The register dates from the year 1841 (baptism), 1842 (burial). The living is a rectory, yearly value about £100, with residence, in the alternate gifts of the rectors of Havant and Warblington and held by the Rev. George Austen M.A. of Jesus College, Oxford. The area is 1,830 acres, and the population in 1871 was 377.

STOCKHEATH is 1 mile north-west. BROCKHAMPTON is a tithing, three quarters of a mile south-west. The town of Portsmouth derives its chief water supply from the springs of this district; there are several reservoirs and a pumping station, the water being forced through large pipes a distance of seven miles; the land upon which these springs are situate was bought originally from the families of Messrs. Hewett and Foster and Mrs. Morey.

LANGSTON, which gives name to the harbour, is 1 mile south, where a chapel was erected in 1869 by H. W. Jeans, esq. to seat about 50 persons, and a service is held by the rector during the week. Langston harbour is an inlet from the Bnglish channel, between Portsea (Portsmouth) and Hayling Island; the entrance at Cumberland fort is about a quarter mile wide, but it soon opens to a general width of about two miles; its greatest length is about three miles: at the entrance the depth at low water is about 8 feet and at high water about 35 feet; but in consequence of it being a bar harbour, vessels of more than two or three hundred a bar harhour, vessels of more than two or three hundred tons, or that draw more than twelve feet of water, cannot enter, as the depth of water on the bar seldom exceeds sixteen feet.

HIGHCLERE is a village 5 miles south from Newbury, west from Kingsclere and 58 from London, in the Northern division of the county, petty sessional division and union of kinguciere, hundred of Evingar, county court district of Newbury, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Andover northern division. The old church of St. Michael and All Angels was situated close to Hishalms Charles clauses approached by a grove of trees. church of St. Michael and All Angels was situated close to Highelere Castle, almost concealed by a grove of trees, above which used to show the square, ivy-mantled tower, but in the year 1870 the parish church was at the request of the parish removed by the Earl of Carnarvon to the immediate neighbourhood of the school, the rectory and the little village of Highelere Street, and there rebuilt under the designs of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, at the cost of the Earl. The present church is a very good specimen of Early English architecture, consisting of chancel, nave and south aisle; the monuments which were in the old church were removed to this building, and a peal of 6 bells was given by the Dowager Countess of Carvarvon: the parishioners subscribed for a handsome organ: at the western end of the church is a large stained window to the memory of Edward Herbert esq. a cousin of Lord Carnarvon, who was murdered Herbert esq. a cousin of Lord Carnarvon, who was murdered by Greek brigands near Athens in 1870; also a very beautiful stained window in memory of the late Countess of Carnarvon, which was presented by Lady Margaret Charteris. The burial ground, with a very pretty chapel, built at the expense of the Dowager Countess of Carnarvon, is a short distance from the church. The register dates from the year 1652. The living is a rectory, tithes commuted at £324 yearly, with shout 80 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Earl of Carnarvon and held by the Rev. Edmund Thomas Waters M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford. A sum of £6 a year, interest of £200 left in 1815 by the Rev. Richard Gairdner, rector of Highelere, is divided between the school and the poor of the parish.

Highelere Castle, the seat of the Earl of Carnarvon P.C. is situated on a bold emineuce in the centre of an extensive and finely timbered park, commanding exquisite views of the distant and surrounding country: the date of the original mansion is unknown: at one time the domain formed part of the estates of the Bishops of Winchester, and in the reign of Edward VI. the manor was resigned by Bishop Poynet to the King, who granted it, with Burgh clere, to the Fitzwilliams; eventually, the property was purchased by Sir Robert Sawyer, Attorney-General to Charles II. and James II. whose memory is deservedly honoured for his defence of the seven bishops: his only child married Thomas, Earl of Pembroke, and thus the estates were brought into the possession of the Herbert family; the ancient edifice has, in the course of successive ages, nuderyone many chances, and was altered and images, undergone many changes, and was altered and improved by the late Sir C. Barry, the eminent architect; the general style is of the time of James I.: the elevated portions of the north and south fronts, the pinnacles and perforated work which surmount the building have a light and vet imposing appearance: the Herbert griffin, holding in its mouth the bloody hand, appears in stone, in every variety of attitude; and the portcullis, so long borne on their banners by that family, is continually seen mixed up with badges, shields and heraldic devices, introduced at different periods by alliances with other noble families, including the Howards, Aclands, Nevilles, Veres and Parrs: each angle of the building is flanked by a tower of elegant proportions: and on the western side, on the site of the old feudal keep, is a magnificent and massive tower: seen from the surrounding country, this tower, rising from the deep and ancient woods that environ it, is an object of much interest and beauty: the castle hall is of great antiquity; the gigantic fireplace, round which the found retainers were wont to assemble, was discovered at the time of the restoration of the castle, and passages traced within the massive walls, constructed probably as a means for concealment or of secret communication during the middle ages: the spacious apartments of the castle are adorned with several choice paintings by Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gains-borough, Vandyck and other celebrated masters. The park borough, Vandyck and other celebrated masters. The park is 13 miles in circumference, and the scenery is unusually varied, and the views from its higher grounds are delightful and extensive: the cedars of Lebanon, sprung from those at Wilton, luxuriate here, and add much to the beauty of the pleasure grounds. The sister hills, BEACON and SIDDOWN, respectively rising 870 feet and 940 feet in height, give a peculiar character not only to the park but to that part of the country. Siddown Hill is clothed with the most luxuriant foliage to its very summit, while Beacon Hill, standing out bare and clear against the eastern sky, exhibits on its bold summit the remains of a British encampment, with the traces of the ancient hutting, still fresh and uninjured by the lapse of ages. Towards the northern verge of the park a lake, embosomed in the forest, presents a scene of tranquil beauty; in this secluded spot the late Earl of Carnarvon restored a casino, built on the margin of the water by his ancestor, Thomas Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, in the seventeenth century, and there his lordship resided while the alterations were carried on at the castle. Looking across the lake, heath-clad islands and deep glades in the forest give unusual interest to this de-lightful scene. In the spring the banks are clothed with exotic vegetation and a profusion of azaless and rhododendrons of every varying hue: for beauty, luxuriance and variety of its American plants, Highelere, "as it was the first place in the kingdom where they attained perfection," surpasses every other at the present day; indeed, the whole scene, as beheld from the windows of the casino when the sun is setting, is of such surpassing softness, that it has been often compared to some of the most favoured scenes of Italy. But the most distinguishing feature of this interesting domain is its free warren and free chase: in virtue of these singular rights, the game over all the district, whether these singular rights, the game over all the district, whether on waste lands or on private properties, belong exclusively to the Herbert family; they still claim the legal right (atthough it has been practically abandoned) of herbouring the stay, the wolf, the boar and other beasts of the chase within that woodland district, which, still rich in thoras, hollies and ancient eaks, was once the favourite haunt of these denizens of the forest. These rights have of late years, in certain parishes, been extinguished on the request of the fresholders. The Earl of Carnarvon is lord of the masser and avaigned late owner. The chief cross are wheat harley and principal landowner. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 3,391 acres; rateable value, £3,256; the population in 1871 was 418.

LYMINGTON is a parliamentary borough, seaport, watering-place, market-town, parish, railway station, liberty, the head of a union and county court and local government board district, and a polling place for the Southern division of the county, in the diocese and archdeaconry of Win-chester and rural deanery of Fordingbridge eastern divi-sion, 201 miles south-west-by-south from Southampton and 105 from London, and is the terminus of a branch of the Southampton and Dorchester railway. The earliest account of Lymington is in Domesday Book, in which it is called Lentune, afterwards Limentum, from which its present name is derived. Lymington, which is a borough by prescription, was incorporated by James I. and formerly returned two members to Parliament, but by the "Representation of the People Act," 1867, it now returns one only. The borough consists of the parish of Lymington and part of Boldre parish. The district under the Public Health and Local Government Board Acts comprises the parish and Local Government Board Acts comprises the parish and borough of Lymington. By the Municipal Act a mayor, four aldermen and twelve councillors are annually elected;

the mayor and ex-mayor are justices of the peace, the county magistrates having concurrent jurisdiction. The town is situated on the western bank of the river Boldre, town is situated on the western mank of the river Boldre, which falls into that part of the Bnglish Channel called the Solent, dividing the mainland from the Isle of Wight. The harbour at the entrance of the creek is excellent. Two lighthouses are placed here. On the quays are commodious wharfs and storerooms. The trade is chiefly confined to decasting venels. Lymington rose into note in the reign of Henry I. having then been made a port, and about the same time it became celebrated for its salt works. In the twentyninth year of the reign of Edward I. the port contributed nine ships and 159 men towards the fleet for the protection of the southern coast. Petty duties were levied by the inhabitants on certain articles of merchandise brought to mmanuanus on certain articles or merchandise brought to the port; but the right was questioned by the superior port of Southampton: the case was tried in the year 1329, and was decided against them, and they were subsequently often fined for peraisting in their claim. In 1750, having again taken these duties, they were sued by the Corporation of Southampton, when they procured the removal of the cause to the County Assize Court, and obtained a verdict in their shown; since which time the petry customs have been resuavour, dince which time the petty customs have been regularly paid. Lymington consists principally of one line of street, more than half a mile in length, including St. Thomas street and High street. The town is lighted with gas. The church of St. Thomas à Becket has been built at different periods: it is of brick and stone, and consists of chancel, nave and south transept, with castellated quadrangular tower containing 6 bells: it was thoroughly restored and MOTTISFONT is a parish 41 miles north from Romsey, 12 north-west from Southampton and 12 east-by-south from Salisbury, in the Southern division of the county, Thorngate hundred, Romsey union, petty sessional division and county court district, and in the diocese and archdeaconry of Windows court district, and in the diocese and arcadeaconry of Win-chester and rural deanery of Romsey, pleasantly situated in a vale through which the river Test flows, adding much to the beauty of the scenery. The South Western railway has a station here, on the Andover, Romsey and Redbridge branch. The branch line of the South Western railway from Saliabury to Gosport also passes through, and has a station 85 miles from London, at DUNBERTOGE, so called from there being a cast-iron bridge erected at this spot over a small tributary of the Test. The church of St. Andrew is an tributary of the Test. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient structure of flint and stone, consisting of chancel, nave and square wooden belify containing 5 belis: it was restored in 1876 and reseated with open benches: the original architecture was Norman; a Norman arch divides the church from the chancel; the belify is now supported by six large oak cross beams: there is a handsome memorial stained window in the chancel to the memory of Sir J. B. Mill, erected by Lady Mill of Mottisfont Abbey': there is also an ancient monument, but the inscription has become obliterated. The register dates from the year 1754. The living is a rectory, with the chapelries of Lockerley and Bast Dean annexed, joint yearly value, £900, with residence, in the gift of and held by the Rev. Paulet St. John B.C.L. of Downing College, Cambridge. The Baptists have a chapel and burying ground. There was originally an establishment of canons of the order of St. Augustine, founded in the reign of King John by William Briwere. Lord Sandys exchanged Chelsea, in Middlesex, with Henry VIII. for this priory. Mottisfont Abbey, a large and ancient mansion, is the seat of Lady Barker Mill, the lady of the manor and chief landowner: in the abbey are preserved some curious relices of embroidery worn by the monks. The soil is loam and sand; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and peas. The area is 2,739 acres: rateable value, £3,569; the population in 1871 was 556.

PETERSFIELD with SHEET.

PETERSFIELD is a parliamentary borough, market and union town, and a polling place for the Northern division of the county, head of a county court district, and petty sessional division, in the hundred of Finch Dean, diocese and applications of Winehester and applications of and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Petersfield, on the old road from London to Portsmouth, 12 south from Alton, 18 from Winchester, 10 from Midhurst and 27 from Southampton, and a station on the London and South Western railway; there is also a branch line to Midhurst. The civic officers of the borough consist of a mayor, who is elected annually, but is not a magistrate by virtue of his office, high constable of the lower half hundred of Finch Dean, two tithing-men, hayward and leather-sealers. The church of St. Peter is an ancient structure, sealers. The church of St. rever is an ancient structure, having chancel, nave and aisles, with square tower, clock, and 6 bells; there are sittings for 720 persons; the fine chancel arch presents remains of the best period of the Norman style; it is supposed that the west tower and nave, with, perhaps, the north aisle, formed the old church, which was built about 1100, if not earlier, by Matilda, the which was built about 1100, if not earlier, by Matilda, the then lady of the manor, with the as-istance of her cousin Bisbop Walkelin, and that the south aisle was added, and the whole building completed, during the Norman period, about the year 1500: it was throughly repaired and restored in 1874, and now presents, with the exception of three windows, which are Early English, all the original features of the Norman edifice; it has been re-seated with open seats, and a new organ chamber built which contains a fine organ: the expenses were defrayed by valuntary cona fine organ; the expenses were defrayed by voluntary con-tributions, W. Nicholson esq. the late member, and his family, being large subscribers; there are several monu-ments of the Jolliffe family, now re-erected in the tower, ments of the Jolliffe family, now re-crected in the tower, and a handsome Norman porch has been added: there are memorial windows to the late Bishop Wilberforce and Mrs. Mary Sumner, the wife of the rector. The register dates from 1558. The living is a perpetual curacy annexed to the rectory of Bariton, joint annual value £1,194, in the presentation of the Bishop of Winchester; the rector is the Rev. John Maunoir Sumner M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford, who resides at Buriton, and is rural dean: the Rev. Sir Frederick Larkins Curie M.A. bart, is curate and lives at the paranage. Here was an institution called Chamberge. Frederick Larkins Curie M.A. bart, is curate and lives at the parsonage. Here was an institution called Churcher's College, established in 1729, but in June, 1877, the school was closed, and the buildings sold by order of the Charlty Commissioners to Lord Hylton, for £1,140: a new scheme has now come into operation: new schools are being built on a site containing 10 acres of land, beautifully structed by Remarkilly and commendiacy ways consistency of the schools. Ramshill, and commanding very extensive views, given by William Nicholson esq. one of the co-optative governors of the charity: the cost of the building will be from £11,000 to £12,000, and it will hold 50 boarders and 100 day scholars. The National schools for boys and girls were erected in 1864, and an infinit school has since here added these schools. and an infant school has since been added: these schools are occupied by the Petersfield School Board, the district of which comprises the parishes of Petersfield and Sheet and a part of the parish of Buriton. There is also a British school for boys and girls. The Congregational chapel in College street was built in 1801, on the site of the old poorhouse: it street was built in 1801, on the site of the old poorhouse: it is much out of repair, and subscriptions are being raised for the purpose of building a new one. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the New Way, which is of modern structure. The cemetery, formed November, 1858, is situated at Ramshill, in a retired and picturesque spot, covering three acres of ground, and having two mortuary chapels and a residence for the curator. There are several small charities for the relief of the poor. A trapholy's 4 lembours are structured to College. the curator. There are several small charities for the relief of the poor. Antrobus's Almshouses are situate in College street. The Willow Almshouses, founded by Mrs. Mary Ann Kennett, in 1863, are for three persons of Petersfield and Sheet. The market, which is held every alternate Wednesday, is well attended, and considerable business transacted in corn and stock of all sorts. The fairs are held July 10th, October 6th (on the Heath), and December 11th: that on the 10th July is held in the Square, and is solely a pleasure fair; the one on the 6th October is for both business and pleasure, a large amount of stock of every description being brought into it; the third fair is for sheep only. In the centre of the large market square is an equestion of which the fair is the state of which the fair is the state of which the state of th trian statue of William III. on a lofty pedestal: the statue formerly stood in the New Way, when the horse was gilded, but on being removed to its present site in 1815, it was painted. The Town Hall was erected in 1824, on the site of the old market house, with its court room and black hole. There are various temperance societies in a flourishing condition; and a house in the Square has recently been converted into a coffee tavern. Castle House was once the Castle Inn, where Charles II. and his queen-mother slept, en route to France. The Corn Exchange, fronting The Square and High street, was erected by a company with limited lia-France. The Corn Exchange, fronting The Square and High street, was erected by a company with limited lishlity; the building is of white brick, with circular-beaded windows and carved keystones, and a lautern roof; in it the corn market is held every alternate Wednesday. The London and County Bank, situate in High street, opposite the Corn Exchange, is a substantial Beaulieu brick building, in the Italian style, with bold cornices, supported on carved trusses, and artistically carved capitals to the windows. The Police Station, with residence for inspector and 1 constable, situate in the New Way, was erected in 1858; the force consists of 1 inspector and 10 constablea, the union of Horndeau having joined with Petersfield to form one district for police purposes, which includes Petersfield, district for police purposes, which includes Petersfield, Sheet, Buriton, Bramshott, Greatham, Lies, Empehott, Hawkley, Steep, Priorsdean, Froxfield, Colmore, Privett. The Cottage Hospital was built in 1871 by voluntary subscriptions, at an expense (including furnishing) of £1,400, and is supported by voluntary contributions, and the payment of patients varying from 4s. to 8s. according to their station: the annual income is about £200: an operating room is being built, at a cost of about £200 in the amount having been raised by subscription; Mrs. Forbes, of Bercleigh House, East Meon, was a large contributor. The 12th Hants Rifle Volunteer Corps have their head quarters at the Town Hall, the old black hole serving as an ammunition store; the average number of men is 90; the open Downs in the neighbourhood afford three separate shooting ranges. The Heath was enclosed in 1867, when a recreation ground was awarded, comprising 35 acres in the parish of Sheet, 4 acres in the parish of Buriton, and 5 acres in the parish of Petersfield, all adjoining, and making together 44 acres, exclusive of a sheet of water, covering 22 acres, around which is an agreeable promenade, much frequented during the summer months, and being encircled by the chain of the South Downs, the Steep Hills, and the heath-clad high grounds of Hindhead, it presents landscape scenery of great beauty; within is the cricket ground of the Petersfield Club. Heath House, the residence of the Honourable William Sydney Hylton Jolliffe M.P. for the borough, is situate about half a mile south-east. The principal landowners are Lord Hylton, who is lord of the manor, John Bonham-Carter and William Nicholson esqrs. The area is 237 acres, exclusive of Sheet; rateable value, £4,823 16s. 9d.; the population in 1871 was 1,587.

PORTSMOUTH, PORTSEA, LANDPORT AND SOUTHSEA.

PORTSMOUTH, PORTSEA, SOUTHSEA and LANDPORT, situate at the south-west point of the Island of Portsea, form, with Portsmouth Harbour, and Gosport on the opposite shore, the seaport called Portsmouth. This great This great arsenal, the largest royal naval establishment and strongest arsenal, the largest royal naval establishment and strongest fortress in England, is a seaport, parliamentary and municipal borough, market town, and railway terminus, head of a county court district, and a polling place for the Southern division of the county, in Portsea Island union, Winchester diocese and archdeacoury and rural deanery of Portsea island, situated on a fine bay in the English Channel, opposite to the Isle of Wight, 66 miles from London, 75 by railway. 28 annth-seat from Southsunton, 16 west from railway, 26 south-east from Southampton, 16 west from Chichester and 27 south-east from Winchester.

Portsmouth originated in the retreat of the sea from Porchester, a naval station established by the Romans on the northern shore of Portsmouth harbour: it was of importance in the time of Henry I.; a naval station in the reign of King John; was fortified by Edward IV. Richard III. and Henry VII.; and it became the principal, if not the only, station for the Royal Navy in the reign of Henry VIII. In the time of the civil war the town was garrisoned for the Parliament,

Portsmouth Harbour is secure and sufficiently capacious to contain the whole navy of England; its entrance is nar-nower than the Thames at Lo-don Bridge, yet having suffi-cient depth of water for a man-of-war to enter at any time of tide. The interior of the harbour expands into a spacious lake, 4 miles long and 2 miles wide, having good anchorage, and sufficient depth of water, even at the lowest ebb, to float the largest ship in the British navy; it has a low-water anchorage for large vessels, of 365 acres. A sandwater anchorage for large vessels, of 365 acres. A sand-bank, called the Spit, projects south-east from the western side of the harbour's mouth, about 3 miles; beyond it, indicated by buoys, and under shelter of the Isle of Wight, lies the well-known and safe roadstead of Spithead. The port extends its jurisdiction from the town of Rusworth on the east to the entrance of the Southampton Water on the the east to the entrance of the Southampton Water on the west, and the roadstead of Spithead and the Bay of St. Helen's, between Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight. There is steam communication with Plymouth and Havre, with Southampton several times during the day, and every hour to Ryde, Isle of Wight.

The Camber Graving Dock was built by the Corporation of Portsmouth, and is 350 feet long, with 18 feet water on blocks and adjoining is a patent the strange up all a suitable of Portsmouth, and is 350 feet long, with 18 feet water on blocks, and adjoining is a patent heaving-up alip, suitable for vessels of 800 tons, the property of Mr. John Read.

Portsmouth is connected with the metropolis by the London, Brighton and South Coast, the London Direct (now part of the South Western system), and the London and South Western railways. The two companies have a coint station at Landont called Portsmouth Town. and and South Western railways. The two companies have a joint station at Laudport, called Portsmouth Town, and another at Portsea, called Portsmouth Harbour; the latter, constructed on piles, facing the Hard and adjacent to the Dockyard, to which it has a single line of rails, thus placing all Her Majesty's Yards in communication by railway; a boat service connects the Harbour station with the Isle of Wight: it was completed in October, 1876.

Portsmouth was incorporated and made a borough by Henry I. whose charter is in the Visitation book of Hampshire. The Reform Act enlarged the boundaries of the ancient borough, and the whole of Portsmouth and Portsea, Southese and Landport, with Kingston and other outlying hamlets, are now included within the borough of Portsmouth, which returns two members to Parliament. The enlarged borough is divided into six wards—St. Thomas, St. George, St. John, All Saints, St. Paul and St. Mary and is governed by a mayor, 14 aldermen and 42 councillors; it has a court of quarter sessions, recorder and coroner; petty sessions are held every day in a room over the gaol by the borough magistrates within the town of Portsmouth; the Guidhall. in High street, where the meetings of the Council Guildhall, in High street, where the meetings of the Council are held, is a room of noble proportions, well lighted, and furnished with every convenience.

The borough is divided into two parishes, viz., Portsmouth and Portsea, the latter comprising Southees and Landport.

The town of Portsmouth is in the form of a quadrangle, has an area of 110 acres: the streets are mostly narrow, but it is well paved and lighted, and there are some substantial houses in the High street and on the Grand parade.

and opened in 1879: it is built of red Fareham bricks, with Bath stone dressings, and will hold 190 scholars; the cost of same was nearly £5,000.

A School Board for the borough was constituted in January, 1871, and now has either finished, or in course of erection, 12 schools, to hold 9,521 children.

Charities amounting to about £50 are distributed yearly. The Royal Naval Club, Portsmouth, was formed in the year 1868, for the association of commissioned officers of all ranks in Her Majesty's royal navy and royal marines; the extension of the buildings was commenced and completed in 1875. The club house is now on the plan of the leading London clubs, and contains dining and coffee rooms, library, reading and writing rooms, smoking, billiard and card rooms, with the necessary offices for the secretary; an upper smoking room, or prospect tower, is provided over the main entrance in the centre of the building; the style is modified Italian, the construction is of stone as sight is modified its and parti-coloured brickwork with stone above; two balconies extend the entire width of each wing, on either side of the entrance. Mr. Thomas Hellyer, of Ryde, Isle of Wight, is the architect. The club consists of over 1,000 members and honorary members, and the architect.

The area of the parish is 129 acres of land and 95 of water; rateable value, £35,875; the population of the brough in 1871 was 119,569, and of the parish 11,569; the registrar-general now (1880) estimates the borough population to be 134,324.

PORTSMOUTH DOCKYARD AND FORTIFICATIONS.

Portsmouth Dockyard, which is situate in the town of Porties, is entered through gatoways situate at the end of the famed "Common Hard," and others called Lion gate and Mariborough gate, and contains upwards of 300 acres of basins,

The Reform Act enlarged the boundaries of the | docks, slips, factories, workshops and storehouses. The magnificent extension works, situate on ground mainly reclaimed from the harbour and the old dockyard, contain 3 basins, which have depth of water sufficient to float any ship now which have depth of water summent to not any ship how in existence, and have an aggregate area of 61 acres. Here are 18 first class docks and five alips in which first-rates can be constructed. In the dockyard is a chapel, of which the Rev. George Godfrey Ward Clemenger B.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, is chaplain.

for the troops generally quartered in the southern district. The two armouries contain in the aggregate about 40,000 stand of arms. The creek which once separated the two towns was filled up in 1876.

The Royal Powder Magazine at Tipner, situate at the northern extremity of Portsea parish, is the store of gunpowder for Her Majesty's navy and land forces, and is in charge of an officer of the Army Control Department, who resides on the spot; there is also a detachment of the line to guard the magazine and premises. The average store of gunpowder is 2,000 barrels.

The fortifications constructed in the eighteenth century round the towns of Portsmouth and Portsea have been razed, and much more extensive works erected, with razed, and much more extensive works erected, with numerous detached forts, forming a circle round a centre situate in the dockyard, and at various distances, up to four miles, from this centre. Three of these detached forts are in the Solent, with foundations built up from the bottom, others extend from Stokes Bay to Fareham, thence along the Portsdown range of hills to Bedhampton, where the harbour of Langstone prevents any approach by land, and Fort Cumberland, at its entrance, prevents an approach by sea from this direction. The chain is further continued by sea from this direction. The chain is nurther continued along the shore from Fort Cumberland to the entrance of the harbour by Eastney and Lumps Forts and Southsea Castle; while the entrance to Portsmouth Harbour is guarded by the batteries on the Portsmouth shore and Blockhouse Fort on the Gosport side.

There are five barracks within the town of Portsmouththe Cambridge, the Clarence and the Angiesea barracks, situate near the east end of Queen street, Portsea, ocupied by regiments of the line; the Colewort by the Army Service Corps; those in Broad street for the Royal Artillery; and the Gun Wharf barracks, near the Custom House, for 7th brigade Royal Artillery.

Eastney Barracks, the head quarters of the corps of Royal Marine Artillery, are three miles east of Portsmouth and front the sea Immediately in rear of two earthworks which are connected by a long curtain, and alongside of which runs a military road from Portsmouth to Fort Cumberland and Langstone Ferry. The barracks are bullt of brick, the main building, which is parallel to the line of beach, holding 1,200 men: in the rear are a covered drill shed, recreation 1,200 men: in the rear are a covered drill shed, recreation rooms and stables, and behind them again a theatre for the men, canteen and provision stores, and quarters for about 150 soldiers' families: the parade ground is in the form of a square, the main building occupying the north side, the meas establishment and single officers' quarters the east, and offices and officers' quarters the west. The total area covered is 24 acres and about 40 acres in addition are made use of as allotment gardens for the men.

At Fort Cumberland, one mile more to the east, a detachment of the same corps is quartered for drill and gun practice; it will hold 600 men, but is principally occupied by married soldiers and their families.

Here is a prison, situated in St. Mary's road, Kingston, which was opened on 31st August, 1878: the building is of Plymouth marble with castellated turrets, surrounded by a massive wall of the same material (adjoining is the governor's house): it will hold 116 male and 54 female prisoners, from the borough of Portsmouth, the city of Chichester and the Western division of the county of Sussex: they may also be received from Southampton. The Sussex; they may also be received from Southampton. prisoners are mostly employed at mop making, both for the public and her Majesty's service.

The Victoria Park was opened on April 25th, 1878, by W. D. King esq.: the park, consisting of 8 acres, is situated between the Commercial, Edinburgh, Park and St. Michael's roads and has entrances in the three former, the principal one being in Commercial road.

Southsea is in the parish of Portsea and within the borough of Portsmouth, and is of recent origin. Its name is taken from Southeea Castle, built in the reign of Henry VIII.: it is a beautiful bathing place: the beach is considered to be one of the best in England: the place has been much improved by the erection of many fine houses and terraces suited to the wants of a superior class of visitors. Adjoining the beach is Southsea Common, which is the property of the Government, and on which the troops of Portsmouth garrison are constantly drilled and exercised. Close to the water's edge and adjoining the Clarence Esplanade pler are situated the Assembly Rooms and Baths: adjoining the rooms are warm, shower, vapour and other baths. A beau-tiful esplanade, nearly 2 miles in length, now skirts the margin of the shore, extending from the Royal Beach Mansions hotel to the Assembly Rooms. Landport and Southsea Tramway connects the Portsmouth Railway stations with the Southsea pier by a single line of rails: it was constructed at a cost of £10,000.

A handsome pier has been constructed opposite the Royal Beach Mansions hotel : the structure is principally of iron, and was completed in 1879.

St. Paul's is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1835 from the parish of Portsea: the church, in St. Paul's square, was completed and consecrated 25th October, 1822: it is in the Perpendicular style, and is built of Bath stone, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles: the windows are very beautiful; of chancel, nave and aisles: the windows are very beautiful; the mullions and tracery are of cast iron: the altar-piece, representing St. Paul giving thanks to God for his escape from the shipwreck, was painted by Mr. Charles Skottowe, and was presented to the church by the subscribers in 1827. The register dates from the year 1822. The living is a vicarage, with an endowment of £150 (which with the pew-rents and offertory constitute the vicar's income), in the gift of the vicar of Portsea and held by the Rev. PRIVETT is a village and parish 6 miles north-west from Petersfield and 13 east from Winchester, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of East Meon, and union, petty sessional division and county court district of Petersfield, dioceae and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Petersfield. The parish church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and consecrated April, 1878, was built at the sole cost of William Nicholson esq. of Basing Park, from the designs of A. Blomfield esq. and is an exceedingly beautiful structure in the Early English style, consisting of a chancel, nave with aisles and clerestory, north and south transepts, a western tower and spire rising to the height of 160 feet and a north porch: the walls externally are of raked-outflints, with dressings of Doulton stone, and the exterior is enriched by many specimens of carving, including a statue of the present bishop of the diocese, which occupies a richly carved niche upon the north side of the tower: there is a fine peal of 8 bells: the walls internally are lined with Ham Hill stone banded with Bath, while a dado of Dumfries runs round the building: the pavements throughout are of Italian marbles laid in mosaics: all the seats and fittings are of oak: the windows in the nave and transepts are of tinted cathedral glass, while those in the chancel are stained and illustrate passages in the life of Our Lord: the stone carving in the reredos, font, pulpit and in many other parts of the church is well worthy of notice: the altar cloth is a fine specimen of Belgian needlework: the organ is a good one, and all the services are choral. The register dates from 1545. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £243, with modern residence, in the gift of William Nicholson esq. and held by the Rev. John Frederick Falwasser M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Wm. Nicholson esq. of Basing park, is the chief landowner. The soil is varied; on the chalk hills it is a loam and stiff clay, in the valleysit is a stiff clay; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are oats, wheat, barley and beans. The area is 1,279 acres; rateable value, £1,102; and the population in 1871 was 230.

RINGWOOD.

RINGWOOD is a parish and market town, head of a union, and station on the Southampton and Dorchester branch of the and station on the Southampton and Dorchester branch of the South Western railway, and a polling place for the Southern division of the county, in the hundred and petty sessional division of the same name, Fordingbridge county court district, diocese and archdeacoury of Winchester, and rural deanery of Fordingbridge western division, 91 miles by road and 103 by rail from London, 29 south-west from Winchester, 21 west from Southampton and 181 chester, 21 west from Southampton and 184 from Salisbury. chester, 21 west from Southampton and 184 from Salisbury. It was occupied by the Romans as a military post. In 1685, James, Duke of Monmouth, after his defeat at the battle of Sedgemeer, near Bridgewater, was brought to Ringwood, having been captured at a place called the Island, not far from this town. The town is pleasantly situated on the cast branch of the river Avon, which contains salmon, fine trout and other fish; the river contains a considerable body of water, and the meadows, lying low, are frequently overflowed. The town is lighted with gas.

The church of SS. Peter and Paul is cruciform, and appears to have been erected in the thirteenth century, and was a fine building of large proportions, with a massive was a fine building of large proportions, with a massive tower at the intersection of the nave and transepts, and a chancel 50 feet by 22 feet, with a lofty triplet at the east end and eight continuous lancet lights on the north and south sides, the internal arch mouldings being supported by Purbeck marble shafts: in consequence of insufficient repair, the whole building had gradually fallen into decay, and the various additions which had from time to time been made so disfigured both the exterior and interior, that the local committee, appointed to superintend the restoration of it, finding the walls more decayed than was expected, were obliged to the walls more decayed than was expected, were obliged to continue taking down one part after another, until the whole body of the church with its transepts were removed; the estimate, which was originally £3,789, was thus increased to £0,659: the chancel also was pulled down and rebuilt by the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge, the patrons of the living, at an expense of about £850: there is a handsome east window, representing important points in the History and Life of 8t. John the Baptist; it was erected to the memory of her frusband, John Morant esq. by his widow, Lady Caroline Morant and her tiree sons: there are also two lancet windows to the memory of a furner vious, the also two lancet windows to the memory of a former vicar, the also two lancet windows to the memory of a former voar, the Rev. C. H. Maturin, in the chancel: one stained lancet window, in memory of Robert Davey esq. and his wife, by their surviving children; also two stained lancet windows have been put in by the parishioners, to the memory of a former vicar, the Rev. R. Holmes Tuck; and one stained lancet window to Mary Jane Gosse Hamper: a memorial window here been put up at the west send of the abunch here. window has been put up at the west end of the church, by Charles Castlemaine esq.: there are sundry monuments in Charles Castlemane esq.: there are submy mutuality the church, also a very ancient brass, somewhat mutilated, but still exhibiting the rich ornamentation of a priest's robes: through the exertions of the late vicar, a beautiful alabaster pulpit, with open oak panels, has been erected, at a coat of nearly £100; the sacrarium has been paved with Minton's tiles, from a design by the Rev. Lord Alwyne Compton, and the whole of the east wall has been covered with painting in distemper, which forms an admirable framing for the stained glass in the triplet: the painting is intended to form part of a memorial to the family of John Keble, the author of "The Christian Year," whose mother was a daughter of John Maule, vicar of the parish, who lies buried with two of his sons, both named John, in the chancel: a with two of his sons, both named John, in the chancel: a reredos has been erected to the memory of the late vicar, the Rev. George Williams, close to the east wall of the chancel, upon four corbels of Bath stone, and extends the length of the communion table, rising to a height of 6R. 10m. above the base: it consists of three panels of Derbyshire alabaster, standing on a slab of Sicilian marble, which serves as a re-table: from this marble slab arise four clustered bases supporting twelve columns of Devoushire marble, burnsonnted by four richly-carved pure Rarly Raglish foliage caps, from which spring the arches forming the gable: between these stand four marble columns with carved capitals, surmounted by four angels in white alabaster, holding quatre-foil shields, bearing emblems of the Passion: each of the gables is carved with crockets, the remire one being surmounted by a cross, and the other two by finish richly worked in alabaster: each panel is lined with a mosaic, in gold, by Simpson & Son, of London; an Agnas Del is represented on the centre mosaic, and the sacred monogram on the other two: the whole work of the reredos is executed with great skill and taste, and with its rich moulding and polished exterior forms a very beautiful feature in the chancel. The registers date from 1561, and are in tolerably good condition. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Bisterne and the rectory of Harbridge annexed, joint annual value £1,300, with residence, in the gift of King's College, Cambridge, and held by the Rev. William Frederick Witts M.A. late senior fellow of that college.

The Free School, founded in 1577, by Richard Lyne, is now extinct: it possessed, in conjunction with similar schools at Shorborne and Wimborne, exhibitions at one of the universities.

Here are Wesleyan, Baptist, Unitarism and Congrega-tional places of worship: the latter, built in 1866 on a site presented by Messrs. Carter, at a cost of about £2,000, is a handsome white brick building, with stone dressings, and two handsome turrets: it was struck by lightning on the 3rd January, 1878.
A Wesleyan chapel was erected in 1879, of red brick, faced with Bath stone, in the Gothic style, capable of holding 200 persons, having vestry and school room attached.

At the south-east end of the town is the Cemetery, which was consecrated on the 1st of January, 1864: It comprises three acres, two of which are for the Church of England, and the remaining one appropriated for Nonconformists: the buildings are Gothic, of Swanage stone, with Bath dressings; they consist of two chapels, of equal dissensions, provided with bell turrets, and connected by a corrider, from the centre of which rises a spire of Bath stone, 80 feet high; and a porter's lodge near the entrance gates: the ground is surrounded by a wall of Swanage stone.

The Town Hall, erected in 1868, at the expense of John

Morant esq. is of red brick, with Bath stone dressings: over the principal entrance is a balcony, resting on elaborately carved stonework, the centre having the coat of arms of the Morant family: the building contains a magistrates' meeting room, where the petty semions are held; also the Cora Ex-room, where the petry semions are hald; also the Corn Exchange, with ante-rooms, and a library and reading rooms.

A Lecture Hall was erected in 1874; it is Gethie, of white and coloured bricks, and capable of holding 600 persons: it was presented by Miss Carter, a resident, for the free use of the town, costing about £2,000: it is used as reading rooms, library and lecture room; the architects were Mesers. Kemp-Welch and Reynolds, of fallsbury.

There is a manufactory for making linear collars and cuffs, employing about 150 females; a trade of some extent is carried on in the manufacture of a peculiar kind of knills wellker which circum amplication.

is carried on in the manufacture of a peculiar kind of knitted woollen gloves, which gives employment to a number of females at their houses in this town and neighbouring villages; an extensive business is now being carried on here by Messrs. Mandon, Armfield & Co. millwrights and agricultural implement makers: there are also two breweries: this town was somewhat noted for its strong beer, but this trade has considerably decision.

There is a market for corn, cattle and pigs on Wednesday, and a repository cattle sale every other Wednesday; and the fairs are on the 10th of July and 11th of December.

The late William Clark eq. a brewer of this town, left, in 1833. £3,100 for the erection of almshouses for poor persons 28.5.) £3,100 for the creation of almosouses for poor persons of Ringwood over forty years of age; also the interest of £2,500 for the support of the occupants (who receive tenshillings each on the first Mouday in each month), and the interest of £200 to keep the building in repair; the almohouses were created in the year 1846.

Attached to the church there are charities of about the yearly value of £60.

The Manor House, the preparty of Hay Richard Morant esq. is pleasantly situated north of the town; St. Ives

House, the residence of Henry Turneur Armitage esq. is west of Ringwood, on an eminence commanding extensive views of the Isle of Purbeck, Salisbury and the Dorsetshire

Avon Castle, the seat of John Turner-Turner esq. is situated on the banks of the river Avon, about 21 miles south of Ringwood: it is surrounded by most picturesque grounds, and the natural undulations of the hills behind it, grounds, and the satural unemations of the inits benine r, combined with the water and the woods, form a prospect seldom surpassed: the Castle has only lately been completed; it is built of Purbeck stone and is of large proportions: it occupies the site of the former residence, which with the property was purchased several years ago by the late Mr. Turner-Turner from the Earl of Normanton, whose proposition is a state of the state perty it adjoins.

J. Morant esq. is lord of the manor. The courts-leet are held at Lady Day and Michaelmas, at which a high constable and other officers are chosen. The principal landowners are J. Moreut esq. John Mills esq. the Earl of Normanton and John Turner-Turner esq.

The soil is partly light and part heavy; subsoil, grayel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, turnips and swedes. The area of the parish of Ringwood is 10,316 acres; rate-able value, £29,742; and the population in 1871 was 3,781; the population of the town alone is 1,960.

BISTERNE is a chapelry annexed to the parish of Ring-wood, and will be found under a separate head.

CROWE is a hamlet, 2 miles south-east; here is a Wesleyan

KINGSTON hamlet is 2 miles south-east; here is a Congregational chapel with schools attached.

POULNER hamlet, 11 miles north-east, is on the South-ampton road, and contains a Baptist chapel. Other places in the parish are Ashley, Wattensford and Moortown.

ROMSEY.

RONSEY is a municipal borough, market and union town, station on the London and South Western railway, head of a county court district, and polling place for the Southern division of the county, 81 miles from London, 15 southern treat Winchester, 7 north-west from Southampton, 15 south-and twelve burgesses; it is paved, and lighted with gas.

A canal, passing through Bomsey, formerly existed be-tween Andover and Redbridge: this is now disused, in con-sequence of the Andover and Redbridge railway having been made principally upon the bed of the old canal: those portions of it not used by the railway remain as a drainage for adjoining lands.

Romsey is a town of great antiquity, being traced to the possession of the Romans during their rule in Britain. Many antiquaries have supposed that its origin and rise are to be dated only from the foundation of the Abbey, but Dr. Stukely, after very deep research, has felt justified in classing it as a Roman city, under the name of "Arminis:" the Doctor is of opinion that this name was not long retained, for when its precise situation became known it was termed "Romana Insula" (the Roman Island): it should here be stated that the ancient town and abbey of Romsey really stood upon an island, one side of which was, and still is, washed by the river Test, whilst the other was bounded by a stream, now partly arched in, running along Church street, and forming a junction with the Test near Breadstreet, and forming a junction with the Test near Bread-lands. A modern writer, Mr. Spence, in an "Essay on the Abbey Church of Romeey," somewhat favours the position assumed by Dr. Stukely, and observes in support of it— "When we regard the situation of Romsey, we find that it is nearly equi-distant from Sorbiodunum (Old Sarum), Brige (Broughton), Veula Belgarum (Winchester), and Clausentum (adjoining Southampton): these were stations of acknowledged importance, between which much inter-course must have been maintained, and it would have been next to an impossibility for the Roman legions in their marches between Clausentum and either of the two firstmentioned places to have avoided the site of this town."

A valley more beautiful, or a fairer island than that of Romsey, could hardly be found, and, as the same writer observes, "it would be no small reflection on the known good taste of the Romans to imagine that they would neglect a spot so favoured;" if, however, any doubt on the subject remained, it would be at once set at rest by a reference to the journal of the British Archæological Asso ciation, wherein a description is given of some Roman coins found in 1845 at Abbotswood, a place adjoining the town. In the Domesday Survey the abbey is described as the

The town is divided into two distinct parishes, distinguished as "Infra" and "Extra." The municipal borough comprises the Infra and part of the Extra: in parochial matters they are entirely distinct, but for purposes ecclesiaatical they are united. The exact site of the ancient clurch of the Extra parish is not now known; it is supposed, however, to have stood northward of the abbey, on land now called "Belfrey ground," and it is known to have been dedicated to St. Lawrence: it appears to have been a vicarage, the great tithes belonging to the monastery. It cannot be pretended that Romsey, at any time during its existence—at least prior to the Reformation—ranked as its existence—at least prior to the Reformation—ranked as a place of any importance, or was ever known or distinguished apart from its stately abhey. This venerable building, which has been restored, without in any way destroying its original character, presents a valuable specimen of the architecture of the early ages: according to the most reliable information, it was founded by Edward the Elder, son of Alfred the Great: the original institution was in all probability small, and very scantily endowed, and it was not until Edgar, the grandson of Edward, ascended the throne, that its rise fairly comm-need; this prince baving secured himself against the Danes, turned his attention to the ecclesiastical establishments, which he declared "to the outward sight were nothing but worm eaten and rotten outward sight were nothing but worm-eaten and rotten lumber:" assisted by Dunstan, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, he effected a complete reform throughout his dominions. With reference to Romsey, according to Stowe, the Abbey was solemnly "confirmed by King Edgar, in the presence of all the nobilitie, on Christmas Day, 974." In a monkish chronicle, said to be that of one Peter de Langtoft, King Edgar, and the foundation of this Benedictine order of nuns, is thus referred to:—

"Mikille he wirschiped God and served our Lady The Abbey of Rumege he feffed richely With rents full gode and kirkes of pris He did ther in of Nunnes a hundredth ladies."

of Boulogne, became abbess: this lady it was of whom Henry. II. made such notable use in checking the arrogance of Thomas à Becket: the king seems to have struck boldly at the root of the prelate's "mysterious and superstitions supremacy." by declaring a total disregard of monastic vows; with this view he incited Matthew of Aisace, son of vows; with this view he incited Matthew of Alsace, son of the Count of Flanders, to woo and marry the Abbess of Romsey, without resorting to the Pope for any dispensation; this Count Matthew actually succeeded in doing, and backed by Henry, set at deflance Becket, the Chancellor of England, the Archbishop of Rheims, and the whole church. The momentary seems to have pursued a very even and quiet course under one abbess and another, nothing noteworthy happening until Amicia—a most energetic lady, and doubtless a strict disciplinarian—became the ruler; on commencing her sway, this lady, probably arguing that it was uselves issuing mandates unless she had means to enforce their observance, looked ground for the means of enforce their observance, looked around for the means of punishment in case of any disobedience, and discovered to her dismay that not only had the public gallows disappeared, but that the right of the abbess to condems and leasy had become obsolete: in this extremity she actually petitioned the king (Henry III.) for restitution of the "privilege;" and the Royal Letters Patent, dated 47 Heary III. regranting the coveted authority, are to be found on the roll of royal grants: the abbess also procured the charter for or royal grants: the absess also produced the charter for holding a fair: the last abless was Elizabeth Ryprose: she surrendered the monastery to Henry VIII. in 1539, at which time its revenue amounted to £528 8s. 164d: with trifling exceptions, these high born ladies presided over the convent committed to their keeping with honour and credit; and they were held in such esteem that the noises of the land were glad that their children should be sheltered within the reliable of the abley; and so highly was it esteemed for example of walls of the abbey; and so highly was it esteemed for sanctive and the estimable character of its humates, that it was considered one of the best establishments for the education and culture of the female mind. Christina, sister of Edgar Atheling, lived and died here. Robert of Glo'ster notifies her entry thus:—

" Edgar Athelyng, That rygt eye was of England, and kande to be king, Made his yonge suster, as God gef that cas, Name of the hous of Romeseye, Christyne hyre name

It was to this lady's care that Maud, daughter of Malcolm, King of Scotland, was entrusted, whose subsequent marriage with Henry I. was designed to unite the Saxon and Norman races, and set at rest for ever the animosities by which each in turn was moved.

The stately abbey church may be said to vie with any in England in point of antiquity, and the diversity and purity of its architecture: with this, as with other edifices of the like nature, it is next to an impossibility positively and satisfactorily to define the Late Saxon and the Early Norman, or clearly to distinguish one from the other : both are trace able as imitations of the architecture introduced by the Romans, and may be said to be that which prevailed from their departure to the time of Henry II. when the order known as the Early English came into vogue; of course, during this period deviations may have occurred; and doubt-less, immediately after the Conquest, the rapid import of talent into England very much tended to the expansion and improvement of the rude designs of the Saxons; the addition of embellishments and more elaborate workmanship is that alone which marks the transition from Saxon to Norman.

Of this particular kind Romey Abbey is considered one of the largest and most interesting specimens in England. The church (St. Mary) is cruciform: the transepts and choir, with the exception of the upper eastern windows, are of undoubted Norman: a large portion of the nave is of the same character: the western end (probably an addition) is regarded as a fair specimen of the Early English: there are three stained windows inserted in the western lancet to the memory of Viscount Palmerston, at a cost of £1,300, raised by public subscription: there are elso many remarkably fine specimens of the Decorated style, which came into use shortly after the death of Edward I and these are the more valuable, as showing how fine were the first attempts of our forefathers at that mode of "elegant enrichment" which now a forns this magnificent grade of architecture. The foundations of a beautiful Lady Chapel in the same Early Decorated style have been discovered by the vicar: this chapel must have been built at the end of Edward the First's He did ther in of Nunnes a hundredth ladies."
The first abbess was Marivanna, a lady of noble origin and great piety, who was succeeded by Elwina: during the ministry of this abbess, the Danes, headed by Selwyn, effected a landing, and proceeded direct to the monastery, which they pillaged: by some miraculous agency the abbess which they pillaged: by some miraculous agency the abbess is said to have received brief warning of the invaders' approach, so that a speedy flight to Winchester saved the nuns and the 'holy relies:' several other ladies of high rank succeeded, but nothing important transpired until Mary, youngest daughter of King Stephen, sister of William, Count dations were also discovered at the same time those of the original Norman chapel, of smaller dimensions: it was rectangular, and not apaidel, as had been supposed: the tower, rising from the intersection of the nave, choir and transept, is heavy Norman, and rises very little above the original pitch of the roof: the dwarfash armount of the troof. pitch of the roof: the dwarfish appearance of this tower was some years since sought to be amended by the creetion of a woodwork frame; something in the form it presents might pass as a hen-coop on the deck of a sea-going vessel, but perched on the summit of this beautiful abbey it can be regarded in no other light than that of a disfigurement and an eye-sore; unlike most cathedrals and abbeys, this building has no western entrance; whether it originally had any or not is not known, but the impression is that it was always much circumscribed as regards means of entrance and exit: a southern entrance has been re-opened which formerly led into the cloisters: the work of this doorway is so unlike the interior, while it resembles the Norman so much, that many think it to be the work of French artists : here is preserved at least one interesting relic, doubtless the work of the hands of the nuns; this is a brautiful cope, afterwards converted into an attar cloth; it is of green brocasted velvet. richly adorned with stars worked in go d : there was formerly another cloth of a like but more valuable description, but this has disappeared. The register dates from the year 1569. The living is a vicarage, value £365, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester and held by the Rev. Edward Lyon Berthon M.A. of Magdalene College, Cambridge, and rural dean of Romsey.

There is a school for boys, in connection with a charity called Nowes's Charity, in which 20 boys, sons of members of the Church of England, receive a good elementary education, besides special instruction in the principles of the Church: the boys are clothed during the time they are at school, and are subsequently apprenticed at the cost of the charity, the trustees having power to regulate the amount of apprentice fees according to the merits of the pupils: it is now incorporated with the National school. There are two other schools, one at Fisherton Anger, near Salisbury, in which 10 boys from that city and parish, and a second at Yeovil, in Somersetshire, in which 10 boys from that town and the parishes of Preston Plucknett and Alvington, receive a similar education with the same advantages as at Romaey: a similar education with the same advantages as at Romsey; the qualifications for admission to the charity being also the same: the funds of the charity are derived from an estate in the parish of Dibden, Hants, of 660 acres: half the income is applied to the Romsey school and the remainder between the other two. The present trustees are the Right Hon. Sir William Heathcote bart. of Hursley Park, Hants; the Rev. Gilbert Wall Heathcote, fellow of Winchester College; Mr. Charles J. Tylee, of Romsey, is the receiver and soli-

There is a National school, to which is attached St. Barbe's charity (a rent-charge of £30 yearly), a foundation similar to Nowee's.

Here are Baptist, Congregational, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan chapels.

A Cemetery, comprising three acres with two mortuary chapels, was consecrated in 1857 by the Bishop of Winchester.

There are six almshouses, erected by J. Bartlett esq. 1807, with an income of £207, and four by John Kent esq. 1692; in addition £130 from various charities is distributed yearly.

A Corn Exchange, erected in 1865, partly by subscription and partly by shares, occupies a prominent position between the two market places: the building is used as an auction room and for occasional public meetings, and is the head-quarters and drill-room of the 11th Hants Volunteers. In the principal market place is a fine bronze statue of Vis-count Palmerston, by Noble: it was crected in 1867 by public subscription.

The Town Hall, a lofty structure, built of red brick, with Bath stone dressings, erected in 1866, is situated at the corner of Bell street, in the Market place: here are held the county count, magistrates', commissioners' and other public meetings. There is likewise a reading-room with library in connection with the Local Literary Society. During the winter session courses of lectures are given, with readings and musical entertainments.

The market day is Thursday, and a large market is held on alternate Thursdays. There are three fairs—Easter Tuesday, August 26th, and November 8th, for horses and cattle.

There are tan-yards, breweries, corn mills and a paper mill.

A Workmen's Club was established in 1873: it has a comfortable reading-room, well supplied with papers and periodicals, besides a room for refreshments, in Bell street.

Broadlands, the seat of the Right Hon. William P. Cowper-Temple u.p. for South Hants, is a noble structure, with lofty porticoes over the principal entrances: it stands in the midst of a park of 400 acres, embellished with cedars and class of unusual size and beauty: the pleasure grounds extend to the river Test, which down the purch the court of the river Test. extend to the river Test, which flows through the estate: this was the birth-place and favourite residence of the great statesman, Viscount Palmerston: the old mansion, which belonged to the St. Barbe family (and was visited by James I.), is no longer visible, having been enclosed by additions commenced in 1770 (by the second Viscount Palmereton): the park is close to the town, and is used for festival gatherings of the various schools, friendly societies and other institutions of the town and neighbourhood, which are frequently held here, through the kindness and liberality of Mr. Cowper-Temple. The principal landowners are the Right Hon. W. F. Cowper-Temple, who is lord of the manor, and John Willis Fleming's trustees.

and John Willis Fleming's trustees.

The area is—of Romsey Extra, 9,100 acres; Romsey Infra, 210 acres; rateable value of Romsey Extra, £17,975; of Romsey Infra, £6,237; the population in 1871 was, of Romsey Extra, 3,625; Romsey Infra, 2,056; the latter comprise the municipal borough.

Ashfield, Cupernham, Lee, Mainstone, Toothill, Woodley, Woodbury and Wools are in Romsey Extra.
